SAILOR MISSING AFTER FIRE ERUPTS ABOARD NAVY VESSEL IN MUMBAI

One sailor was missing after a fire erupted onboard INS Brahmaputra, which was undergoing refit at Mumbai's Naval Dockyard, on Sunday night

BLAZE PUT OFF, BUT SHIP LISTS TO ONE SIDE

Though the fire was brought under control by Monday morning by the ship's crew with the help of fire fighters from the dockyard, the ship later started listing to one side. Despite all efforts, the ship could not be brought to an upright position, the Navy said. "The ship continued to list further alongside her berth and is presently resting on one side," it said

SEARCH ON FOR MISSING JUNIOR SAILOR

- A search was underway for the junior sailor who was missing. All other personnel who were on the ship have been accounted for
- The Navy said further follow-on actions, including sanitisation checks for assessment of residual risk of fire, were carried out on the ship, which is an indigenously-built multi-role frigate

ECONOMIC SURVEY 2023-24

Growth story pared with dose of realism

Economic Survey contradicts the government's anti-China stance; seeks to shift the responsibility of job creation to the private sector

MUTED GROWTH FORECAST

- Survey says GDP growth in FY25 would slow to 6.5-7% from 8.2% in FY24
- The projection is lower than 8.2% estimated in 2023-24 and RBI's forecast of 7.2%
- The muted projection is due to global uncertainties and various domestic challenges

SURVEY SURPRISES

- Review FDI policy to bring investments from China
- Chinese firms can make in India, to tap export market
- Govts should "renounce some powers" to help improve governance
- Artificial intelligence could impact workers, regardless of whether they are low-killed or high-skilled
- Private sector and state govts need to do more to create jobs: Corporates must invest in tandem with their profit growth and states need to formulate policies and incentives for job creation
- Private companies contribute to 'toxic mix of habits' among workforce such as social media, screen time, sedentary habits, and unhealthy food
- Excessive speculation and overconfidence of retail investors in stockmarket a matter of grave concern

DIPAK MONDAL @ New Delhi

INDIA's march towards Viksit Bharat in 2047 may not be a walk in the park amid rising global uncertainties, climate change risks, and the 'huge pall of uncertainty' cast by artificial intelligence (AI). Premised on this reality check, the Economic Survey 2023-24, tabled by Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman in Parliament on Monday, presents a mixed picture of hope and high water.

Though the Survey asserts that India's economy is on a "strong wicket and stable footing, demonstrating resilience in the face of geopolitical challenges", it outlines in great length the challenges ahead. In this context, the report pegs GDP growth rate at a conservative 6.5-7% for FY25, lower than the estimates of many domestic and international agencies.

"It is not that we are not optimistic about growth, we are just making aware of the challenges it faces going forward," said Chief Economic Advisor V Anantha Nageswaran.

He outlined three major challenges facing India's growth – geopolitical tension and growing inward looking economic policies in the developed world; climate change and global warming; and, the AI casting a huge pall of uncertainty on workers across all skill levels.

To boost manufacturing and plug India into the global supply chain, it is inevitable that India plugs itself into China's supply chain

Chief Economic Adviser V Anantha Nageswaran

Overcoming these challenges will need a 'grand alliance' of Union, state governments, and the private sector, says the Survey. The three stakeholders should work in tandem for generating productive employment by reducing the skill gap, boosting the MSME sector by easing compliance burden, de-cluttering financing bottlenecks, and managing the China conundrum, it adds. Raising concerns about inequality and the poor health of the young population, the Survey ticked off the private sector for encouraging sedentary habits among employees. With the external sector remaining uncertain, the Survey says the domestic sector should do the heavy lifting.

Notably, the Survey seeks to shift the responsibility of job creation to the private sector. "Employment generation is the real bottom line for the private sector," says the CEA, under whose supervision the Economic Survey report was drafted. It also says that private sector investment has not been commensurate with the benefits it received from the corporate tax rates in 2019.

Cautioning that the deployment of AI could have deleterious impact on jobs, the Survey says deploying capital- and energy-intensive AI is probably the last thing a lower-middle-income economy needs.

In a clear departure from the general anti-China stance of the government, the Survey bats for more Chinese investment to boost domestic manufacturing, adding that India must 'plug itself' into China's supply chain. "Whether we do so by relying solely on imports or partially through Chinese investments is a choice that India has to make," it says, hinting that the anti-China policy has not been helping India. KANWAR YATRA

SC stays order to eateries to show owners' details

SUCHITRA KALYAN MOHANTY @ New Delhi

THE Supreme Court on Monday issued an interim stay on directives issued by the governments of Uttar Pradesh, Uttarakhand and Madhya Pradesh asking eateries along the Kanwar Yatra route to display the names, addresses and mobile numbers of their owners.

"Food sellers may be required to display the kind of food they are serving. But, they must not be forced to display the name/identity of the owners and also the employees," a two-judge bench comprising justices Hrishikesh Roy and S V N Bhatti said.

It was hearing pleas filed by the Association For Protection of Civil Rights, Trinamool Congress MP Mahua Moitra and Prof Apoorvanand, challenging the state governments' orders.

During the hearing, Justice Bhatti said he used to frequent a vegetarian restaurant in Kerala run by a Muslim. "Without disclosing the name of the city, there is a vegetarian hotel run by a Hindu. There is another vegetarian hotel run by a Muslim," Justice Bhatti said. "I was going to the hotel run by a Muslim for vegetarian food. When it comes to food standards and safety, he was displaying everything," he said.

The bench issued notices to all three states and asked them to file their responses in time for the next hearing slated for July 26. Welcoming the order, the Congress said it hopes Prime Minister Narendra Modi will make BJP CMs aware of their raj dharma.

DKS: 30 tmcft of Cauvery water released to TN

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Bengaluru/Mandya

DEPUTY Chief Minister and Water Resources Minister DK Shivakumar said on Monday that 30 tmcft of water has been released to Tamil Nadu from Karnataka's reservoirs in the Cauvery basin so far.

Addressing reporters after visiting Krishna Raja Sagar (KRS) dam in Mandya, Shivakumar said, "We are releasing 51,000 cusecs of water to Tamil Nadu every day. We have released 30 tmcft of water and if we release 10 tmcft more, it will meet the TN's quota in a normal monsoon year."

Sharing the government's plans for this sowing season, Shivakumar said officials have been directed to take steps to fill 1,657 tanks in the state's Cauvery basin.

"The agriculture minister has fixed a target to take up sowing in two lakh hectares of land. We have many programmes for this sowing season, including distribution of 5.90 lakh quintals of seeds to farmers, stocking 27 lakh tonnes of fertilizers and giving loans to the tune of Rs 25,000 crore to 30 lakh farmers through cooperatives," he said.

The Cauvery Water Management Committee (CWMC) had directed the state to release 20 tmcft of water from July 11 to July 30 to Tamil Nadu. "But it was not done due to poor water levels in our dams then. We called an all-party meeting and discussed the matter," he said.

'Cauvery Aarti' planned at KRS

Sparks fly over NEET-UG on Budget session day 1

PREETHA NAIR @ New Delhi

FACING heat from the Opposition on the opening day of the Budget session in the Lok Sabha over the NEET-UG row, Union education minister Dharmendra Pradhan rebutted all charges on Monday during Question Hour, saying his government is not hiding anything, adding there is no evidence of paper leak in the last seven years.

Minister Dharmendra Pradhan speaks in the Lok Sabha on Monday

Leader of Opposition (LoP) Rahul Gandhi led the offensive, alleging many are convinced that the Indian exam system is a fraud. "The education minister has blamed everybody except himself. I don't even think he understands the fundamentals of what is going on here... The issue is that there are millions of students in this country who are extremely concerned about what is going on and who are convinced that the Indian exam system is a fraud," Rahul charged.

Countering the argument, Pradhan said "only one case" of malpractice has come to light in Bihar and the CBI is investigating it. "Regarding anomalies and information of some malpractices, out of 4,700 centres, due to proactive approach of Bihar Police, only in one place in Patna and surrounding points, there is an incident of anomaly. CBI is getting into the details. Some action has been taken. We are hiding nothing. Everything is on record," he said.

While Rahul demanded a one-day discussion on the issue, the minister said, "I am here at the mercy of my leader, the prime minister. Whenever question of accountability comes, my government is answerable to that."

When other Opposition leaders like SP chief Akhilesh Yadav alleged that the Modi government will create new records in paper leaks, Pradhan hit back, saying: "I have a list of how many paper leaks happened when Akhilesh Yadav was CM."

Later, writing on X, Pradhan questioned why the Congress-led UPA failed to implement bills to stop malpractices in educational institutions.

BBMP to be split into 10 corpns, Bill to be tabled today

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Bengaluru

The chief minister will be the chairman of the authority. The government is likely to table the Greater Bengaluru Governance Bill-2024 in the Assembly on Tuesday. The plan is to restructure the BBMP to transform it into a three-tier setup with the chief minister at the top. Municipal corporations and ward committees will form the other two layers, which will be accountable for improving the administration, sources said.

Besides carving out the city corporations as East, West, South, North and Central, Nelamangala, Devanahalli, Hoskote, Ramanagara, Kanakapura, Anekal and Bangalore Rural would also be included.

HC terms viewing child porn an offence, recalls earlier order

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Bengaluru

HOLDING that browsing child pornographic material is an offence under Section 67(B)(b) of the Information Technology Act, the High Court of Karnataka rejected a petition filed by a 47-year-old man, challenging the case registered against him for watching child pornography on his mobile phone.

Justice M Nagaprasanna passed the order on July 19 while rejecting the petition filed by Inayathulla N of Hoskote near Bengaluru. The case was registered by Bengaluru CEN Crime Police under Section 67B of the Information Technology (IT) Act on May 3, 2023.

Inayathulla was booked for allegedly viewing a website which exhibits pornographic material of children between 3.50 pm and 4.40 pm on March 23, 2022, after it was tracked by Cyber Tipline, which placed an alert on its Tipline about the IP address that led to his mobile number and then to his address.

Inayuthulla questioned it on the grounds that his action won't attract Section 67-B as he was watching a pornographic website on his mobile phone and never intended to circulate anything. P5

No special status for Bihar: Centre

PREETHA NAIR & RAMASHANKAR @ New Delhi/Patna

THE Centre on Monday ruled out granting special category status to Bihar, a long standing demand of Bihar Chief Minister Nitish Kumar-led Janata Dal (United), a crucial ally of the NDA government.

In a written reply in the Lok Sabha on Monday, Minister of State for Finance Pankaj Chaudhary cited an inter-ministerial group report of 2012 to assert that a case for granting special category status to Bihar is not made out. He said special category status was granted in the past by the National Development Council to some states, based on certain criteria, which did not apply in Bihar's case.

The development comes a day after JD(U) leader Sanjay Kumar Jha voiced his party's demand for the status at an all-party meeting. The Lok Janshakti Party (Ram Vilas), also a BJP ally, and the RJD, too, raised the demand at Sunday's all-party meet.

Reacting to the Centre's response, JD(U) spokesperson K C Tyagi said: "JD(U) would keenly looking at Nirmala Sitharaman's budget speech on Tuesday to what is on offer for Bihar."

The JD(U) has already said that it is willing to settle for a special financial package.

Meanwhile, the RJD hit out at Nitish Kumar demanding his resignation. "He should resign immediately, he has said that he will get special state status," RJD chief Lalu Prasad Yadav said.

K'taka to have its Doppler Weather Radar atop Nandi Hills

BOSKY KHANNA @Bengaluru

KARNATAKA will finally have its own Doppler Weather Radar (DWR) this year. It will be installed atop the Nandi Hills, 62 km from Bengaluru.

"If all goes well (the pending soil test results), work on installation of DWR will start in two months," IMD-Bengaluru Director N Puviyarasan told The New Indian Express.

A team of IMD officials with their counterparts from horticulture and revenue departments visited the Nandi Hills 10 days ago and shortlisted four sites there. Samples for soil testing are being taken and results will be known after a month-and-a-half.

Dr Jitendra Singh, Union Minister of State (Independent charge), Ministry of Science and Technology, recently wrote to Union Minister of State for Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises and Labour and Employment Shobha Karandlaje confirming that IMD would install a C-Band DWR "in Bengaluru" this year to strengthen early warning system benefiting numerous stakeholders and the public.

Singh said the site for the radar had been identified and discussions were on with the state government to acquire it.

IMD also selected land at Air Force Station Yelahanka (AFSY) in Bengaluru. The IAF responded positively. If soil at the Nandi Hills is not conducive to install DWR, then it will be installed at AFSY.

Installing DWRs atop hills has been done in the north-eastern states. Installing the radar at the Nandi Hills will be ideal as no construction can take place there. A major challenge in installing it is that there should not be any high rise structure within its radius of 40 km, Puviyarasan said. P5

BDA COMES UP WITH PLAN TO REVIVE PRR

Works on proposal to combine project with Metro rail to draw bidders and ensure it's executed fast

BOSKY KHANNA @Bengaluru

THE Bangalore Development Authority (BDA) is making another attempt to revive one of the long-delayed infrastructure projects of the city — the Peripheral Ring Road (PRR). This time, the authority is thinking of combining the project with Metro rail.

A senior BDA official said, "We have tried everything, but the project is not taking off. No bidders are coming forward. There are also land acquisition issues. We are planning to propose combining the road works with Metro rail, which is also expanding across the city. This will not just help draw companies to bid for the tender, but will also ensure the project is completed."

As per BDA's plan, gaps have to be earmarked along the median of the eight-lane carriageway for public utilities. "These gaps can be utilised for laying Metro rail lines. Bengaluru is fast growing and so is the need for Metro rail. The Metro connectivity in future needs to be expanded. So instead of acquiring land later, the two projects can be combined and executed fast," the official said.

The proposal will be placed before the BDA Board and the government for discussion and final approval before deciding on the next course of action.

The PRR project was first conceptualised in 2006 for 116 km, to form a ring around Bengaluru connecting Hosur Road, Tumakuru Road, Bannerghatta Road, Old Madras Road and Magadi Road. The project was delayed and shelved due to land acquisition and financial issues. Half of the PRR, 42km, was built by the Nandi Infrastructure Corridor Entreprise (NICE) from Hosur Road to Tumkuru Road.

To revive the project, in July this year, NICE Managing Director Ashok Khenny proposed to execute a portion of the project from Tumkuru Road to the international airport. But nothing moved forward. Recently, the BDA also decided to split the project into three when calling for tenders. BDA had called for tenders thrice, but no bidders came forward. The project also landed in litigation with farmers opposing the land acquisition cost and process. The BDA had also proposed the Build, Own, Operate and Transfer (BOOT) model for the PRR, but that was also not accepted by builders. JICA agreed to fund the road construction cost, but not the land acquisition cost.

BDA Chairman NA Harris said, "The long-shelved PRR will be completed and all steps will be taken. Metro is also needed for Bengaluru and so is the PRR."

BYLAWS VIOLATIONS

BBMP engineers help BJP leader put up unauthorised floors

MOHAMMED YACOOB @ Bengaluru

BRUHAT Bengaluru Mahanagara Palike (BBMP) engineers allegedly allowed BJP leader Suresh Babu to construct five unauthorised floors on a building coming up on 6th Cross, Wilson Garden. Enraged, an activist filed a complaint with BBMP against former Assistant Director of Town Planning (ADTP) South, and Assistant Engineer of Chickpet.

In his complaint addressed to BBMP Chief Commissioner Tushar Girinath, complainant Anthony Das (Kala) said, "I have filed a complaint against Dharam Singh Nayak, former ADTP and now posted as Assistant Engineer, Projects, and Kotresh Nayak, Assistant Engineer, VV Puram, who was earlier posted in Hombegowda Nagar, for not taking any action against the cent per cent deviation in construction plan, besides five unauthorised floors."

The BBMP had issued a notice, seeking explanation and documents from building owners under Sections 248 (1) and (2) on March 30, 2024, and confirmed violations like 100 per cent deviation in the construction of stilt, first, second and third floors. It certified the fourth, fifth and terrace as unauthorised construction on April 8, 2024, under Section 248 (3) of BBMP Act 2020. The engineers were directed to take steps to remove unauthorised construction of the 8-floor building on property number 62-110-15/1 at 6th Cross, Hombegowda Nagar, Wilson Garden. When they failed to act, additional unauthorised floors were constructed.

> I have built only an eight-floor building in the area. There are 11- and 12-floor buildings which are very common. A bill will come up before the Governor with regard to high-rise buildings. We will pay for the extra guideline value and get the building regularised
> Suresh Babu, BJP leader and land owner

"Had the engineers taken action at that right time, the owner would not have added the 6th, 7th and 8th floors. Inaction by engineers is nothing but dereliction of duty, and their silence allowed him to construct five unauthorised floors. Had an ordinary person built a small unauthorised floor, BBMP would have taken action by now," said Das.

He stated that two officials were in charge of Hombegowda Nagar three months ago, when the deviation and unauthorised construction at the property took place, and charged that present ADTP Sandeep and AE Rame Gowda of Town Planning are also party to the said violation as they too failed to remove unauthorised constructions under section 356 of the BBMP Act, 2020.

142 FIRs lodged over illegal flexes since June 1

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Bengaluru

EVER since the Bruhat Bengaluru Mahanagara Palike (BBMP) started its crackdown on illegal flexes and banners on June 1, 8,362 flexes have been removed and 142 FIRs have been registered.

Following incidents of political leaders and their supporters defacing public areas with illegal publicity hoardings, the Palike had given standing instructions to ward engineers to remove them and lodge FIRs.

Civic officials lodged 267 complaints with the jurisdictional police for registration of FIRs and collected Rs 1,03,000 as penalty from those involved in putting up unauthorised flexes.

BBMP Chief Commissioner Tushar Girinath had instructed officials to ensure that there were no unauthorised advertisements in all sectors and to take legal action. Also, Special Commissioner (Revenue Department) Munish Moudgil will hold a review meeting with senior officials and get a report regarding the installation of unauthorised advertisements.

Citizens send a photo or video of illegal banners or hoardings along with the address to the corporation helpline number 1533 or the advertisement department's WhatsApp number 9480683939 to initiate appropriate action.

BBMP to take up survey of street vendors soon

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Bengaluru

BRUHAT Bengaluru Mahanagara Palike (BBMP) Chief Commissioner Tushar Girinath and Special Commissioner, BBMP Welfare Division, Suralkar Vikas Kishore held a virtual meeting with senior officials on Monday regarding the survey of street vendors and identification of vending zones.

According to All India Central Council of Trade Union (AICCTU) member Vinay Srinivasa and activists working for street vendors' rights, the civic body will take up a zone-wise survey of street vendors and will not involve any agency.

"This is a big move. When the BBMP hired an agency the last time, the survey had a lot of issues and many vendors were missed. The staff complained about travel allowance, and many stopped the enumeration after 5 pm. Due to this, street vendors were not counted after 5.30 pm," said Srinivasa.

The activist also said the move would fix accountability. The union has submitted a memorandum with demands. "We have highlighted several issues and hope the same is not repeated this time," he added.

The special commissioner said the survey will kick off in a month. "The zonal commissioners will decide on vending and non-vending zones based on central and state government rules," Kishore said.

Officials said after the survey, eligible vendors will be given identity cards and certificates.

MLA: ₹8cr collected every month to pay higher-ups

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Bengaluru

BJP MLA from Yelahanka SR Vishwanath on Monday alleged that Rs 8 crore is collected at the Yelahanka sub-registrar's office every month and passed onto higher-ups. He demanded Revenue Minister Krishna Byre Gowda to take action.

Raising the issue during the calling attention motion at the Assembly, he said that around Yelahanka, there are over 100 illegal revenue layouts where the land has not been converted from agricultural to residential purposes. These illegal layouts do not have any amenities and have been registered with bogus documents. "They collect Rs 35,000 per registration and every month, around Rs 8 crore is paid to higher-ups. We don't know who those higher-ups are," he said. He pointed out that these layouts have 20ft-wide roads and do not have any amenities. "Since we go there to appeal for votes, we spend from our MLA funds to provide amenities," he said.

Replying, Byregowda said they have decided in the cabinet to transfer sub-registrars working in the BMRDA limits through counselling. "We have also passed instructions that those working for over five years at the same place in Bengaluru should be transferred outside the city. It is true that agricultural lands are turned into revenue layouts without any conversion procedures. Many are doing this illegally and systematically. Chief Minister Siddaramaiah and Deputy Chief Minister DK Shivakumar have issued directions to stop this," he added.

Daily Starscope

PETER VIDAL

23RD July : There's a particularly challenging series of alignments coming up, so my advice to all people of goodwill is to keep calm, never be unduly provoked and always give other people the benefit of the doubt. That's the best way to turn potential disagreements to constructive growth and mutual understanding.

ARIES (Mar 21 - Apr. 20)
Because today's conditions are so changeable, it is difficult to see whether your domestic and family affairs will reach a successful conclusion, or if they will require further effort. It's best, I'd say, to forget the big picture and press ahead with small details.

TAURUS (Apr. 21 - May 21)
One purpose of astrology is to anticipate, and so avoid approaching problems. When, over the next few days, arguments erupt over a failure to complete the most routine of chores, there is one simple solution: co-operate and compromise at every turn.

GEMINI (May 22 - June 21)
Rather than talk yet again about your complicated economic situation, it would be far better to focus on your deep-seated attitudes towards money. Why, you must ask, have you stuck so rigidly to old priorities? This is the question you have to answer before you can press ahead at home.

CANCER (June 22 - July 23)
That magical planet Mercury decrees that it's time to do some hard thinking – and, perhaps, to start to face up to some awkward decisions. It is perfectly acceptable to follow your intuition but you must also pay close attention to the facts; perhaps not the easiest of jobs.

LEO (July 24 - Aug. 23)
The balance is now tipping irrevocably towards secrecy in your emotional affairs. Rather than just going along with such impulses, why not ask yourself why you are so reluctant to communicate your feelings to others? The end result, as a matter of fact, could be to save some extra cash.

VIRGO (Aug. 24 - Sept. 23)
It may be that you have to wait until the end of the week before hearing the final outcome of family arrangements. This is not because anyone is being tardy, but because it takes the Moon a long time to enter the appropriate sector of your chart.

LIBRA (Sept. 24 - Oct. 23)
The Moon's intriguing relationships should keep you on your guard against unfair accusations or allegations. But please don't concern yourself unduly with anything said in the heat of the moment. Partners are just likely to be over-critical without any apparent reason.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22)
Only another Scorpio will understand just how much you have been through this year. Yet, you must realise that the planets are often tough in order to be kind, and the personal challenges you have encountered have made you a wiser, warmer person.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23 - Dec. 22)
You may still feel a little unnerved or unsettled, although I would honestly doubt whether you have anything substantial to worry about. Now is the moment to get your affairs back on an even keel. Or, at least, to start the process. Waste no time!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23 - Jan. 20)
There are two types of planetary aspects affecting all Capricorns at the moment; long-term formations which are difficult to pin down to a specific time, and short-term fluctuations which produce sudden changes of mood or plan. It is the latter which predominate today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 - Feb. 19)
Whatever else happens, you can be sure that you are in a generally favourable period: the upsetting impact of Mars in personal relationships is countered by the confidence-boosting alignments of Mercury and Jupiter. The best advice comes from younger friends: chill out!

PISCES (Feb. 20 - Mar 20)
By now you are thinking along totally new and original lines, and you should feel absolutely certain that things work out to your advantage. You must make sure that partners and colleagues understand your plans perfectly, otherwise you could miss out on their support.

KR PURAM RLY STN GASPS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

Passengers struggle with narrow staircases to platforms; lack of escalators makes it difficult for elderly, women

S LALITHA @Bengaluru

WITH the Metro station opening last year, the Krishnarajapuram railway station has emerged as a crucial station for passengers to alight midway and reach their homes. But the station lacks many basic amenities, making it a miserable experience for passengers. The Railways stresses that improvements are in the offing.

The station has four platforms and an average of 20,000 passengers and the general public make use of the station on a daily basis.

Passengers using the station are quite upset over the situation here. Among them is Pranav Balakrishnan, an electronics engineer at a private firm, who travels to Chennai once a month. He told TNIE, "The chaos begins right at the entrance to the station on the Old Madras Road. The entry is like a hole in a fence as the area is completely taken over by autos. One needs to somehow enter the station. Buses are unable to stop here and go a bit farther. Public dash across the road from the KR Pura Metro station to the railway station with the Foot Over Bridge getting built."

When one enters the station, PF 4 is not connected to 2 and 3 by escalators. "Those with heavy luggage or senior citizens really struggle to change platforms," he said. The platforms by themselves are narrow.

The Passenger Information System is dominated by advertisements with train arrivals or departures listed for just a few minutes. "Anyone in a hurry to reach a train can only view ads," Balakrishnan added.

Dr AS Ramaswamy said he uses this station almost daily. "It is a punishment for the elderly or women with kids to carry luggage through the narrow steps. If two or three trains arrive, it is pure chaos with a stampede waiting to happen. RPF is of absolutely no help," he charged.

Additional Divisional Railway Manager Parikshit Mohanpuria told TNIE that many improvements are in the offing at the station. "The Constructions Division is carrying out quadrupling between Bengaluru Cantonment and Whitefield. The yard remodelling is happening. "When the yard is remodelled, the platform will be widened at the ends. At present, it begins at 12 metre and tapers down to 8 metre towards the end."

Passengers jostle to make their way through one of the narrow staircases at KR Puram Railway Station | EXPRESS

A dedicated passenger information board will come up shortly, while provisions for escalators are being planned. "More Railway Protection Force personnel will also be deployed," Mohanpuria added.

WOMAN, SON DIE AFTER INHALING TOXIC GEYSER GAS

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Bengaluru

A 39-year-old woman and her 16-year-old son died after inhaling toxic carbon monoxide (CO) gas from a gas geyser in the bathroom. The boy, who had gone for a bath, first inhaled the toxic gas and collapsed. As he did not come out for a long time, his mother went to check and is suspected to have fallen unconscious herself, after inhaling the gas. The incident occurred in Magadi police limits on Sunday evening.

The deceased have been identified as Shobha and her son K Dileep, residents of Jyothinagar in Kodipalya, Magadi. The incident came to light after Shobha's daughter, who works at a jewellery shop, returned home around 7.30 pm. After finding her mother and brother lying unconscious in the bathroom, she alerted neighbours. They were then taken to hospital around 8.15 pm, where they were declared brought dead.

"While having a bath, Dileep had closed the bathroom window. As there was no space for ventilation, he is suspected to have died inhaling the toxic gas. We suspect that looking at her son's condition, his mother fell unconscious and in the process also inhaled the toxic gas," said a police officer.

Shobha was a labourer, while her son was a student. She was a widow, and was staying with her daughter and son. The police are awaiting the postmortem reports to ascertain the exact cause of death. The Magadi Police of the Ramanagara district have registered a case of unnatural death.

KCOCA CASE

Notorious land grabber booked

ENS @Bengaluru

A notorious land grabber, accused of grabbing over 100 plots in the city by creating fake property documents, has been booked under the stringent Karnataka Control of Organised Crime Act, 2000, by the CID.

John Moses (49), a resident of Maruthi Sevanagar, was arrested and taken into CID custody. "The investigating officer initiated further proceedings after booking him under KCOCA. CID sleuths on Monday produced him before a court, which remanded him in judicial custody. Moses' associates will have to be arrested, and they will be booked under KCOCA," said an officer.

Moses and his associates were active from 2017 to 2021. Cases against the crime syndicate were registered in various police stations across the city. The CID has completed investigations in 51 cases and filed chargesheets in the court.

"The Registrar of Small Matters Court had registered a case in December 2020 in the Halasuru Gate police station against the accused. The case was handed over to the CID for further investigation. During the course of the investigation, many similar crimes were uncovered, and more than 100 cases were registered. In all these cases, the involvement of Moses and his associates was revealed," according to a press release from CID.

Investigation proved that the crime syndicate not only seised land, property and houses of people, but also threatened them and cheated them of crores of rupees.

CABINET DEFERS DISCUSSION ON JOB QUOTA

To pass resolution against NEET in Assembly, may ask Centre to allow state to hold test

CM Siddaramaiah holds consultations in the Council on Monday | NAGARAJA GADEKAL

THE CM Siddaramaiah cabinet on Monday did not officially discuss the contentious Employment of Local Candidates Bill to ensure job reservation for Kannadigas in the private sector. But it decided to pass a resolution in the ongoing joint session of the legislature to oppose NEET as it thought to mete out injustice to Kannadigas.

The state government is likely to follow the Tamil Nadu model to urge the Union government to scrap NEET and allow the state government to take up medical admissions based on Class 12 marks, as was done before NEET was introduced. Medical Education Minister Dr Sharan Prakash Patil briefed the cabinet on NEET, sources said.

The cabinet also decided to pass a resolution against the 'One nation, One election' proposal, which is under consideration of the Union government. The cabinet discussed the issue of ED officials allegedly putting pressure on former managing director of the ST Corporation, Kallesh, to name ex-minister B Nagendra in the alleged multi-crore scam.

Informal discussion on quota bill, 14-hr workday

The cabinet informally discussed the job reservation for Kannadigas in the private sector, over which ministers were at loggerheads. Labour Minister Santosh Lad was in favour, arguing that it will help Kannadigas and tried to convince the chief minister. Whereas Large and Medium Industries Minister MB Patil and RDPR and IT-BT Minister Priyank Kharge were against it, saying it will have an adverse impact on the growth of industries, sources said. The CM decided to take it up for discussion officially in the next cabinet meeting.

On another controversial proposal of increasing workday from 10 hours to 14, the cabinet decided to hold discussions with stakeholders, a source said.

ED officials threatened complainant with 7-yr jail

In his complaint, Kallesh stated that the ED officials summoned him to record his statements in connection with the scam on July 16. Accordingly, he went to the ED office and gave his statements to Muruli Kannan, assistant director. He answered 14 of the 17 questions Kannan asked him. He sought time to answer three questions stating that he had to go through some files and talk to his subordinates. Kannan is said to have told Kallesh to come with the files on July 17 and that he would also call his subordinates for inquiry. After the hearing, Kallesh signed the papers of his statements, but the ED official refused to give him a copy.

Kallesh stated that then Kannan sent him to Mittal's chamber. Kallesh accused Mittal, an IRS officer, of labelling him as a criminal. He also accused Mittal of threatening him that he would be arrested and would have to suffer without bail for two to three years. Mittal and Kannan have been accused of forcing the complainant to give in writing that the scam money was deposited in bank accounts on the direction of Siddaramaiah, Nagendra and officials of the Finance Department. They have also been accused of telling Kallesh that ED would help him if he listened to them. Otherwise, he would be sent to jail for seven years.

Land beat
by village accountant to check encroachment

In order to monitor and check land encroachment in panchayats, the state government is introducing a land beat system, where a village accountant has to walk on the borders of the government land in his jurisdcition, and if any encroachment is noticed, he must report it to the Tahasildar. Revenue Minister Krishna Byre Gowda said that at present, Karnataka has 14.5 lakh acres of government land and records of all the lands including the map and villages are available on an app. "We can tell the amount of much government land located in each village within a few seconds. We have digitalised it and the data of these lands are available along with a map," he said. He reiterated that they are introducing a land beat, where a village accountant will walk on the border of the given map.

Guidelines
for malls on dress code soon

The state government will issue a set of guidelines for all malls regarding restrictions on people's attire, said DCM DK Shivakumar. He was replying in the House over a recent incident where mall authorities refused to allow a farmer to enter as he was wearing a panche and turban. MLAs demanded that similar guidelines also be issued to clubs which impose a dress code. Shivakumar said the guidelines will direct authorities of malls and other public places not to restrict the entry of anyone in traditional attire. He said they will also insist that no dress code should be imposed. "Panche is our tradition and our outfit. We need to ensure such incidents don't occur and we will form guidelines for it," he said.

Govt buying
private land for graveyards: Byre Gowda

Revenue Minister Krishna Byre Gowda said on Monday the state government is facing a shortage of land and this has resulted in buying private land even for public graveyards. Byre Gowda was replying to BP Harish, Harihara MLA, who raised the issue of shortage of land for graveyards in his constituency, during the Assembly session. The minister said the government has sanctioned lands under it for various purposes, including its housing schemes for poor people and development projects. The government is now finding it difficult even to grant land for graveyards. "We are now buying private land for the purpose and Rs 50 crore has been earmarked... The demand for graveyards has increased across the state," Byre Gowda told the House.

Those behind ST corpn scam won't be spared: CM in Council

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Bengaluru

AMID the chaos, Chief Minister Siddaramaiah replied to the debate on the multi-crore scam in the Karnataka Maharshi Valmiki Scheduled Tribes Development Corporation Ltd, in the Legislative Council on Monday. As the BJP members entered the well of the House and protested demanding the CM's resignation, Siddaramaiah tabled a written reply, assuring the members that the government would ensure punishment to those behind the scam.

As many as 15 members of the Upper House had debated the issue for over seven hours. In his reply, the CM attacked the BJP, stating that the only intention of the saffron party was to bring disrepute to him and clarified that the government, finance department or he had no role in the irregularities. "I don't say that there were no irregularities in the corporation. An investigation is on and the accused will be charge-sheeted. The government will take all steps to see that the guilty is punished," he said.

The BJP members intervened several times during the CM's reply, which led to a heated exchange between the members of the ruling and opposition ranks. Congress chief whip Saleem Ahmed urged Chairman Basavaraj Horatti to throw the opposition members out as they were not allowing the CM to speak. This enraged the BJP MLCs, who slammed him, stating that the opposition was there to question the government.

Continuing his speech, Siddaramaiah further attacked the BJP over reducing the allocation of funds for the welfare of SC/ST communities. He said these communities formed 24.10 per cent of the state's population and he had allocated over Rs 29,000 crore for their welfare in his budget in 2017-18, but the JDS and BJP, over the next five years, kept reducing this. "This year, our government has allocated Rs 39,121 crore for their welfare. It is our government which introduced SCSP/TSP and reservation in promotion," the CM said, adding that the BJP had not done anything for their welfare and had no moral right to question the Congress' commitment to the upliftment of the downtrodden sections of society.

At this juncture, the BJP members objected to the CM deviating from the issue. However, the CM continued with his reply, following which the BJP and JDS members raised slogans against him that Siddaramaiah was the 'king of corruption' and entered the well of the House, demanding his resignation. Stating that they were not letting him give his reply, the CM tabled his 12-page written reply and read it on record amidst the protest, after which the House was adjourned for a few minutes.

Chief Minister Siddaramaiah addresses the Council, even as Opposition members crowd the well of the House, in Vidhana Soudha on Monday | NAGARAJA GADEKAL

FINALLY, CHALAVADI MADE OPPN LEADER IN COUNCIL

BENGALURU: BJP MLC Chalavadi Narayanaswamy, who moved a calling attention motion on the diversion of SCP-TSP funds, raised his hand in protest and shouted 'shame, shame' at the Congress benches before walking out of the Legislative Council on Monday. But little did he or other BJP leaders know that within a few hours from then, Chalavadi would be appointed leader of opposition in the Upper House. The post had fallen vacant after the previous BJP leader in the House, Kota Srinivas Poojary, got elected to the Lok Sabha. Chalavadi, who joined BJP from Congress, had to work hard to earn his saffron stripes and now he has been rewarded. A Dalit leader, he has said on many occasions that if he had remained in Congress, he would not have become even an MLC. It is said that though party general secretary BL Santhosh had backed CT Ravi, former national general secretary, and former CM BS Yediyurappa and state BJP president BY Vijayendra had supported the candidature of Ravi Kumar, Chalavadi has been chosen as a compromise candidate. Both camps are said to be happy with his appointment. Party sources said it is social justice that led BJP to appoint a Dalit to this important position as the state party president Vijayendra is a Lingayat and Assembly opposition leader, R Ashoka, is a Vokkaliga. ENS

BJP leaders walk out over fund diversion for guarantees

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Bengaluru

OPPOSITION BJP, led by CT Ravi, walked out of the Council on Monday, saying they were not happy with the replies of Congress leaders, especially PWD Minister Dr HC Mahadevappa.

BJP MLC Chalavadi Narayanswamy had raised the issue of diversion of SCP-TSP funds for the guarantees. Ravi and senior BJP MLC Ravikumar too joined in.

Mahadevappa replied that the issue is a closed chapter as it was discussed extensively for over one year at the Belagavi and previous sessions. Despite that, opposition leaders are not satisfied, he added.

He told BJP legislators that Karnataka was the first state to pass the SCSP-TSP Karnataka Scheduled Castes Sub Allocation and Tribal Sub Allocation -- Planning, Utilisation of Financial Resources Act, 2013. The law allows these funds to be used for SC/STs receiving benefits under other schemes, he pointed out.

Earlier, Chief Minister Siddaramaiah, who was in the House, too stressed the same point. He said BJP is using Goebell's strategy of repeating a lie a hundred times and trying to make it look like the truth. He said his government passed the Act in 2013 and asked why no other BJP-ruled state or the union government had ensured similar legislation. Ravi and Ravi Kumar kept interrupting and Congress leaders said those interrupting the chief minister unnecessarily should be asked to leave the house.

After opposition members walked out, RDPR Minister Priyank Kharge said the previous BJP government too had used SCP-TSP funds for welfare schemes, which are equivalent to guarantees where the beneficiaries are SC/STs.

He went on to list the schemes where the central government, under PM Narendra Modi, had used the funds to provide Rs 6,000 assistance annually to farmers. The then chief minister BS Yediyurappa had raised it to Rs 10,000. The same funds were used for interest subsidy on crop loans and for the Nagarothana, Bhagyalakshmi and other schemes, he added.

DEPUTY CM DK Shivakumar said the state government is planning to start 'Cauvery Aarti' on the lines of 'Ganga Aarti' in Varanasi.

Speaking to reporters after inspecting the Krishna Raja Sagar dam in Mandya on Monday, Shivakumar said, "We will study the plan by forming a committee of 20 members from the Cauvery basin area, including MLAs and officials. We will identify the right location for Cauvery Aarti. We will start this in a month's time. The Muzrai department, Cauvery Neeravari Nigam and other departments will be involved in this."

Meanwhile, he said that Cauvery Brindavan Amusement Park will be developed under the PPP model and is expected to generate 8,000-10,000 jobs. "The proposal will come up before the cabinet in a couple of days. We had approved the plan in the last budget, but it was not rolled out. We will make arrangements for people to stay in the amusement park itself," he stated, adding that the park will completely have a new design.

Asked what would happen to those who are already working in the Brindavan Gardens, the DCM said all those things will be worked out when the detailed plan is ready and the interests of the locals will be protected. He also clarified that there is no question of eviction of local residents to accommodate the new park.

Asked if the trial blasts would be stopped in the interest of the safety of the reservoir, he said there is no question of compromising on the safety of the dam.

Nagendra sent to judicial custody till Aug 3

BENGALURU: A special court on Monday remanded former minister B Nagendra to judicial custody till August 3 in connection with the multi-crore scam at Maharishi Valmiki Scheduled Tribe Development Corporation. Nagendra, who is Ballari MLA, was produced before the court after his extended custody with the Directorate of Enforcement (ED) ended on July 22. The special court for sitting and former MPs/MLAs remanded him to 14-day judicial custody as ED did not seek an extension of his custody. During the hearing, Nagendra's advocate requested the court to take note of his client having a stent in his heart. Nagendra was sent to the central prison at Parappana Agrahara under tight security. The central agency had quizzed Nagendra for 11 days in its custody. He was arrested on July 12 under Prevention of Money Laundering Act (PMLA) by ED following a search operation across the state. Daddal too was questioned by ED. The alleged multi-crore scam is being probed by the Special Investigation Team (SIT), constituted by the state government, and the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI). Nagendra resigned from his position as a minister on June 6 because of his alleged involvement in the scam.

Cong MLA says rules bent in apex bank, min admits to deviation

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Bengaluru

COOPERATION Minister KN Rajanna on Monday admitted that there was a deviation from RBI guidelines in sanctioning loans to MLAs and other people's representatives from the Karnataka State Cooperative Apex Bank Ltd.

Replying to Kaduru Congress MLA Anand KS, who sought information about the people who were granted loans in the Assembly, Rajanna defended the deviation from the guidelines, saying it helped MLAs, sugar factories they owned and also sugarcane farmers.

But he declined to give information, citing a 2015 RBI circular which states that unless the consent of the concerned loan beneficiaries is taken, the information cannot be given.

"As per RBI, there was a restriction in sanctioning housing loans above Rs 70 lakh, but it has been relaxed as some MLAs have been sanctioned over Rs 1 crore," he said.

Not convinced, Anand urged for a probe into the alleged Rs 2,000 crore kitty as per the HC directions. "Otherwise, a big scam, like in the ST corporation, will come out," he warned.

He said NABARD and RBI have written to the government, following an audit report which exposed the alleged corruption as loans were given to sugar factories. "There was a time when farmers were burning their sugarcane crop as no sugar factories were coming forward to crush the cane. Loans given to factories helped the industry," Rajanna claimed.

He told Anand to bring a specific case of corruption and the government will order a probe. Rajanna alleged that Anand has raised the issue to nail his political rival and Apex Bank president Belli Prakash, former Kaduru BJP MLA. "It is not right for Anand to bring disrepute to Apex bank and create suspicion among depositors," he said.

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Bengaluru

FOREST Minister Eshwar Khandre on Monday said the Central government has to take a call to change the Forest Conservation Act, 1980, in order to denotify forest lands occupied by farmers even if they are displaced by projects.

Replying to Tarikere MLA G H Srinivas in the assembly that the forest department was evacuating families displaced because the Bhadra dam was full, the minister clarified that there was a Supreme Court order that said, "once a forest, always a forest".

He also informed that he had not received the dereservation order of the forest from the revenue department. He said he would convene a meeting of water resources, forest and revenue departments to arrive at a decision on how to safeguard the interest of forest dwellers.

The legislators, irrespective of party lines, included Araga Gnanendra. JDLP leader B Suresh Babu said people and forest dwellers, in their respective constituencies, have been facing a similar issue. Replying to them, he said forest officers have been instructed not to evacuate farmers who had less than three acres.

Govt had filed application to recall order in child porn case

ALLOWING Inayuthulla's plea, relying on Section 67B(a) of the IT Act, on July 10, the high court quashed the case against him. The court stated that he had watched the pornographic website and that it would not become publishing or transmitting of material as is necessary under Section 67B of the IT Act.

After the release of this order, the state noticed the short assistance rendered by it and the fact that the Cyber Tipline was not heard in the matter. Therefore, additional state public prosecutor BN Jagadeesha filed an application to recall the order and to bring in Section 15 of the Protection of Children from Sexual Offences Act, 2012, since it was not brought to the knowledge of the court. He also drew the attention of the court that the offences against the petitioner attract 67B(b) which states that browsing is also an offence.

Therefore, the application filed by the state was taken up by the court. It recalled its earlier order passed on July 10 and issued the order rejecting Inayathulla's petition on July 19.While recalling the order, Justice Nagaprasanna said if Section 67B(a) was only looked into, it would have become unjust. Section 67B(b) applies to the petitioner's case.

"Errors do happen. To err is human. We judges are also humans, infallibility is not known to humanity. Therefore, at times, we are fallible. Fallibility is not alien to the functions that judges perform. To rectify the error is the compulsion of the judicial conscience. To eternalise or immortalise the error, after knowing it, is no heroism. In the aforesaid circumstances answering the judicial conscience, compelling enough it is, apart from it being legally expedient, I deem it appropriate to recall the order," the judge observed.

IN a first, the government will conduct door-to-door surveys to track children between the ages of 6 and 18, who are out of school. The initiative comes after a Karnataka High Court directive, and will be done in collaboration with the Rural Development and Panchayat Raj department and the Department of School Education and Literacy (DSEL). Women from self-help groups (SHGs) will be appointed as enumerators to conduct the survey using a mobile app.

Gram Panchayats in the state will take the lead and select two SSLC-qualified women from SHGs to survey 300 households in a village. "The Directorate of Electronic Delivery of Citizen Services (EDCS) has developed a mobile application that will survey students who are not in the mainstream," read a circular from the RDPR department. The women will be trained by the education department to enter the correct details of the children.

As per data provided by DSEL in December last year, during 2022-2023 a total of 18,461 children had dropped out of school. The state is in seventh position for the highest number of dropouts. Between 2017-2023 -- a period of six years -- 71,945 students discontinued schooling, reveals data from Samagra Shikshana Karnataka (SSK).

The department has set July-end as the deadline for the survey to be completed, as directed by the HC. The women conducting the survey will be offered remuneration for their time and allowance for internet expenses.

Nagasimha Rao, Director, Child Rights Trust (CRT), said, "This joint initiative is a significant step towards ensuring every child's right to education. To further enhance the impact, it's essential to involve NGOs working in schools, youth groups and other stakeholders. Additionally, a comprehensive plan to prevent school dropouts, by addressing the root causes and providing supportive measures, will help sustain progress and create a lasting difference in the lives of young people."

He added that out-of-school and child labour are two sides of the same coin. This number will help the government track those children as well. "There is a need to focus on 'disguised child labour' where children mostly work in families," he said.

K'taka launches 'Govt Montessories' in 250 anganwadi centres as a pilot

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@ Bengaluru

THE Karnataka government on Monday launched the first 'Government Montessories' under the state, which will upgrade the current anganwadi centres as educational centres for pre-primary classes. As a pilot project, 250 anganwadi centres in Bengaluru Urban have been converted, and in the first phase, the department plans to open 5,000 such montessories across the state, gradually extending the initiative to all Anganwadi centres.

The rebranding of the centres under the name 'Government Montessories' aims to provide quality education and nutritious food to children from poor and middle-class families, who cannot afford private education. Women and Child Development Minister Lakshmi Hebbalkar inaugurated the first government montessori pre-primary centre for LKG and UKG students, under the Integrated Child Development Scheme in Govindrajnagar.

Speaking to the media, Hebbalkar said, "The government is upgrading anganwadi centres to emphasise education and health, reflecting its commitment to developing children's capabilities from a young age. Today, there are 70,000 operational anganwadi centres and the state also holds the distinction of starting the first pre-primary school within these centres." The minister explained that the initial plan to introduce pre-primary classes through the Department of Education was scrapped due to opposition from anganwadi workers, as it would draw children away from anganwadis centres.

These centres will provide education in both Kannada and English and each child will receive a uniform, bag, and pencil box. Transfer certificates will also be provided to support the child's further educational progress.

Hebbalkar added that the fees charged by private montessories, which range from Rs 80,000 to Rs 1 lakh annually deprive many of the facilities. "To combat these high costs and ensure that every child has access to quality education and nutritious food, the government will offer this free of cost," said Hebbalkar.

Ratna Bhandar repair may take 3 months: ASI

DIANA SAHU @ Bhubaneswar

REPAIR and renovation of both the chambers of the Ratna Bhandar of Shree Jagannath Temple at Puri may take close to three months.

The Archaeological Survey of India (ASI) said this would be the minimum time required given the nature of work, daily rituals and movement of devotees inside the shrine.

The Odisha chapter of ASI has written to the DG ASI on the requirement for repair and renovation of the Ratna Bhandar.

The work revolves around replacement of damaged beams on the roof and consolidation of the cracks on the walls.

The beams in the Ratna Bhandar, which is a later addition to the 12th century shrine, are made of wrought iron. Some of the beams in both the chambers have been entirely damaged and there's a stone hanging from one of them, said Ratna Bhandar inventorisation and preservation committee chairman Justice Biswanath Rath.

Radar will help study clouds in K'taka

Doppler Weather Radar consists of a dome atop a tower. The weight of the radar along with the dome is 6.5 tonnes and the height of the tower is 25 metres. The site required for the entire structure is 20x20 metres.

The soil tests apart, the challenge before the officials for installing DWR atop the Nandi Hills is to ensure that the dome, antenna and radar enter the fort gate without any damage. "The gate is a heritage structure and cannot be damaged. So, alternative ways have to be found to take the instruments inside," he said.

While the park and the garden where the radar is proposed to be installed belong to the horticulture department, the fort, gate and walls are protected by the Archaeological Survey of India. The fort, walls, entrance gate and temple at the Nandi Hills were built by the Palegar dynasty in the 11th Century, subsequently strengthened by the Cholas, the Vijayanagar dynasty and Tipu Sultan.

At present, IMD relies on DWR readings from Kerala and Tamil Nadu. DWR will help study clouds, their location, thunderstorms, cloud depths, direction and wind speed and pattern. It will cover a range of 250 km to provide accurate weather readings.

Over the years, IMD inspected several locations, including the foothills of Nandi Hills, Gandhi Krishi Vignana Kendra, and Hessarghatta, and also appealed to the state government and apartment and commercial establishment owners to provide space on high-rise rooftops to install the radar, but failed evoke positive responses.

SURVEY'S ADVICE ON ALL-SECTOR APPROACH AND JOBS SPOT ON

THE Economic Survey 2024, like its previous editions, may convey more over time than it does in the moment. At first blush, it seems to have prudence and conservatism written all over as it pegs GDP growth for 2024-25 at a modest 6.5-7 percent. Chief Economic Adviser V Anatha Nageswaran even suggested that we do not need big-ticket reforms, but must fix the nuts and bolts to keep the economy humming. His six-pronged growth strategy is to shift away from structural reforms of the last decade that focused on supply-side interventions. Instead, he urged the government to target next-gen reforms that are bottom-up, encouraging private investments that will create jobs and increase incomes.

Over the past 30 years, India's nominal GDP grew 35 times in rupee terms, while it saw a 12-fold rise in output from $300 billion in 1993 to $3.6 trillion in 2024. According to Nageswaran, the country's medium-term growth rate is pegged at above 7 percent. But first, he suggested an all-hands-on-the-table approach focusing on all sectors including agriculture, industry and services, rather than cherry-picking manufacturing or services. As for unemployment, which the opposition claims is hovering at a 45-year high, the Survey noted that India must create 8 million jobs a year. Nearly half the 56.6-crore workforce is employed in agriculture. In other words, industry and services have a country mile to cover. The informal sector and smaller enterprises—the lifeblood of the Indian economy—need a helping hand, be it via credit support or deregulation.

Public investment has been playing the role of a relief pitcher for quite some time now, and it's high time India Inc weighed in. It's not that corporates are bleeding—far from it, they are raking in the dough. Yet, private investment growth continues to be squat in single-digits, waiting for household consumption to show a proof of life. But domestic demand is a product of quality jobs and rising incomes, for which the Survey squarely puts the onus on the private sector and the states. While companies are tasked to create jobs, it wants the states to address issues that influence growth, jobs and productivity. While they do have a role to play, it's also true that growth and jobs are equally among the Centre's key responsibilities. So, the reforms process at that level should not stop.

NEW CRICKET ERA WITH GAMBHIR AT THE HELM

LESS than a fortnight ago, cricket held India to a standstill. The India team ended the ICC trophy drought and had the grandest of welcomes when they arrived in Mumbai, the country's cricket capital. As the hoopla ended, a new dawn quietly broke on the horizon. The T20 World Cup ended the international chapters of two of India's most illustrious cricketers—Rohit Sharma and Virat Kohli—in the shortest format. Along with them, Rahul Dravid also ended his successful tenure as head coach.

To herald the new era, Gautam Gambhir has taken Dravid's place. He will be under immense scrutiny as well. However, right at the beginning, he has made a statement with the appointment of Suryakumar Yadav as the new T20I captain. It was a curveball not many saw coming, especially after Hardik Pandya, who largely led the T20I team between the 2022 and 2024 T20 World Cups, was tipped to take the reins from Rohit. Instead, Gambhir and the selection committee led by Ajit Agarkar decided to go the other way.

Both of them said on Monday that they wanted a captain who could be on the field without injury concerns; they also made it clear it was a decision based on feedback from the players. What this means for Pandya, who will feature in the T20I series against Sri Lanka, only time will tell. Gambhir and Agarkar also made it clear who they are looking at as a potential all-format successor to Rohit—Shubman Gill. The Punjab batter captained India in Zimbabwe and has been named vice-captain for the entire Sri Lanka tour. That he has already cemented his place in the ODI and Test sides only adds to the argument. Gill has the ability to up his game in the shortest format too.

The Sri Lanka series would be a fresh start for a new-look team. No one knows yet how Gambhir will handle coaching. He has brought in coaches he has worked with earlier—there are a lot of expectations riding on his team. One bright thing is that he has another ICC event in February. When the fight for the Champions Trophy comes around, Gambhir will have a chance to etch his name in gold in the history of Indian cricket.

QUICK TAKE

GUARD PILGRIMS' HEALTH

THE Supreme Court's decision to stay the directives issued by some states for shop owners to prominently display their names during an annual pilgrimage season is welcome. Justices Hrishikesh Roy and S V N Bhatti issued notices to the effect to the Uttar Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Uttarakhand and other state governments where kanwar yatra takes place. Also welcome is the bench's order for shopkeepers to be clear and upfront about the food being served to kanwariyas. India's strength is its diversity. Rather than making it easier to play up differences, the state administrations should ensure the pilgrims' health and hygiene during this troublesome rainy season.

A budget is not meant only for the ensuing year. Also, most major economic problems can't be resolved in a year. That's why a longer macroeconomic view is needed

MACRO TASKS IN THIS BUDGET AND BEYOND

ARUN KUMAR

Former professor of economics, JNU and author of Indian Economy's Greatest Crisis: Impact of the Coronavirus and the Road Ahead

SOURAV ROY

THERE are two views about the annual Union Budget. One says it is inconsequential, since nothing much can be done in a budget. Most expenditures are committed, leaving little freedom for policy change. The other view is that it is the single largest item in the economic calendar and has a substantial impact. Since it is the largest item, whether there is continuity or change, its impacts the economy either way.

Most analysts giving opinion on the budget are spokespersons for some business or the other. They take a narrow view of it. Namely, whether their business would benefit or not. Seldom do they take a wider view of the economy and analyse the impact of the budget provisions on the economy as a whole and on the big issues confronting the country. This view by definition is a macro view. It does not balance out various urgent and long-term requirements.

The macro view can help the country focus on major current issues like unemployment, price rise, poverty, inequality, investment, trade and nature of growth. These impact all economic activity, not just specific businesses. If the former is buoyant, so will the latter. This is a positive-sum game where everyone together benefits and India becomes a developed nation. In a zero-sum game, some benefit at the expense of the others.

Since demonetisation in 2016, the organised sector has grown at the expense of the unorganised one, which employs 94 percent of the workforce, in a zero-sum game. It is the cause of rising unemployment and inequality in the country, with consequent social and political strife and instability. Do we need to learn from the current happenings in the neighbourhood?

A budget is not meant only for the year for which it is prepared. It can set the direction of the economy for subsequent years also. Thus, it must be viewed from the standpoint of the next few years, if not the long term. Further, most major problems plaguing an economy cannot be resolved within the span of a year. For instance, unemployment, poverty, inequality, better education and health cannot be taken care of in one year. Only a roadmap can be drawn for addressing these challenges.

Generating jobs

Unemployment is the most critical issue facing the nation. This was also in evidence during the recently concluded elections, especially for the educated youth. Thus, the Budget needs to move towards creating work on a large scale. This is only possible if the unorganised sector regains its dynamism that was dented since demonetisation. It faced three more shocks subsequently in quick succession—a faulty GST, the non-banking financial crisis and the pandemic. The government's promotion of the organised sector and digitisation further impacted it.

The budget needs to reprioritise from its focus on capital-intensive to labour-intensive areas. Capital expenditures presently are focused on infrastructure like highways, railroads and power. While earlier, these projects used to offer a lot of direct employment, now they do not since they are highly mechanised with use of big tractors, bulldozers and cranes.

Substantial employment could be generated if allocations to education, health, rural development, MGNREGA etc are raised significantly. Unfortunately, these heads have faced budget cuts not only in real terms but nominal terms as well. According to reports, MGNREGA is hardly offering 50 days of work on average, while 100 days should be made available for a family desirous of taking on such work. Not that infrastructure is not needed, a reprioritisation of budgetary expenditures is required.

Boosting farm income, micro units

The unorganised sector consists of agriculture, and small and micro sectors. At a rough estimate, there are 11 crore farmers and 6 crore micro units. They offer a bulk of the 94 percent employment in the unorganised sector. If these sectors are boosted, employment would dramatically rise and family poverty would decline as more working hands in the family would earn an income. Inequality too would decline.

Currently, due to unemployment and low incomes in the unorganised sectors, there is a shortage of purchasing power and that slows down the economy. This was the case even before the pandemic, when the rate of growth dropped from 8 percent in Q4 2017-18 to 3.1 percent in Q4 2019-20, just before the pandemic. The capacity utilisation of the organised sector has been hovering between 70 percent and 75 percent as per RBI data. This is not conducive to private investment

Refocusing towards the unorganised sector would benefit the organised sector, even if it does not get the concessions it is demanding. As demand picks up, it would invest more. It has the capital to do so. Investments are being held back due to inadequacy of demand. Thus, boosting demand from the unorganised sector would be a win-win situation.

Reprioritising taxes

Taxation reform is crucial for reprioritisation. GST is an indirect tax that is stagflationary. Its reform, as suggested by this author, is urgent. That would help check inflation and benefit the unorganised sector.

The decline in revenues has to be made up via direct taxes. Checking the black economy would get the government substantial resources. For this, changes in corporate taxation would be required. Taxation of wealth and inheritance would be important to not only raise resources from the top 3 percent of the population but for reducing inequality.

Checking cronyism rather than tax concessions for businesses would boost the business environment more effectively and lead to increased investment. Checking black economy would lead to better governance and achieving policy goals. The direct tax GDP ratio needs to rise from its current level of around 6.2 percent to 12 percent

The challenges for the coming years are all macro—employment, poverty, inequality, prices and environmental sustainability. The ground for these needs to be laid in the Union Budget 2024-25 through a holistic perspective that will iron out contradictions among policies. To achieve the goals, a reprioritisation is needed.

HOW GUESSING CAN NEGATE THE PLUSES OF MCQ EXAMS

S RAJA SETHU DURAI

P MURUGAN

COMPETITIVE exams in India, particularly entrance tests for pursuing higher education, are mostly based on computer-based multiple-choice questions (MCQs). These tests have some advantages in terms of transparency and quicker evaluation. However, what ability these tests are intended to assess needs an understanding.

In recent times, performance in the 10+2 schooling has been used as a mere eligibility criterion. Only these entrance exam scores hold the golden keys to the higher education citadel. As these exams gain prominence and are projected to assess merit of the younger generation, they need critical scrutiny. We are going to examine these exams only from an academic perspective.

Mathematically, a multiple-choice question with n choices will have one correct answer and n-1 wrong answers. So every choice has an equal probability of 1/n to be the correct answer. For example, in an exam consisting of 100 questions with four choices, picking any one choice (called 'guessing' in the literature) for all the questions will fetch 25 marks. This guessing can be prevented by giving negative marks for wrong answers. According to formula scoring, the negative mark should be equal to the ratio of the mark given for the correct answer and n-1. If the mark for the right answer is 1 with 4 choices, then the negative mark should equal 1/3. The logic is that even if the remaining 75 questions are marked wrongly, the 25 marks gained by guessing would be negated. Two situations can still benefit guessing: if the negative mark is less than 1/3, and when a particular choice among the 4 has more occurrences than the theoretical probability of 1/4.

Other intelligent guessing can also get a better score with negative marks. Consider a situation where a candidate is not able to choose the correct option but can identify one wrong option in every question; discarding it improves the probability of a choice being right to 1/3. After deducing the wrong choice, the same guessing can fetch a positive score even with negative marks. On the other hand, exams with no negative marks are simply flat, as no one can distinguish a score equal to the probability (1/n) times the number of questions as an outcome of guessing or factual knowledge.

The National Eligibility cum Entrance Test or NEET has 180 questions with 4 choices, where the correct answer gets 4 marks and a wrong one gets a negative 1 mark. Since the negative mark is less than 1/3, it cannot entirely negate the effect of guessing. Consider the recent NEET conducted in May, for which the answer key is available in the public domain. We observed that each of the four options renders a correct answer ranging between 21 and 30 percent, with a mean of 25 percent as predicted. If a candidate blindly chooses an option that is correct for 30 percent of the questions, she gets 54 correct and 126 wrong. So she can score 90 by mere guessing.

PTI

The marking system used in multiple-choice tests like NEET and CUET allow students to get pass marks with mere guessing. Some global exams have moved on to a statistical approach using item response theory, which takes into account guessing and difficulty levels

Apart from choosing one option for all the questions, finding different patterns to pick can also result in better scores. For example, a candidate who selects a pattern of one option for the first 90 questions and another for the remaining 90, gets a possibility of 56 questions being correct with a score of 100. In this scheme, there is another possibility for a candidate who prepares and knows the answer for only 25 percent of the questions and guesses for the rest. It can result in a score of 216 with a negative mark. It gives the opportunity to achieve the passing minimum merely by guessing, or by effectively preparing 25 percent of the syllabus and combining it with guessing.

The Common University Entrance Test or CUET for undergraduate admissions is in the same format, with 125 to 130 questions. A correct answer fetches 5 marks, and a wrong one gets negative 1. Since the negative mark is not optimal to negate guessing, the associated problems persist. As CUET is conducted across a broad spectrum of subjects for a vast number of candidates, it is conducted in multiple shifts and slots. So there is a need to normalise the scores for equivalence between the shifts and slots, assuming that the difference in the distribution of marks solely depends on the difficulty level of the papers in a slot and shift.

A statistical method called equi-percentile is used for normalisation. Any such statistical method suffers a severe drawback while interpolating a normalised score when there are outliers. In a slot and shift, a small group of brilliant candidates and a large number of average candidates write the exam, and the marked difference in their scores will definitely bring a considerable variation in the normalised score.

The very idea of exams like NEET and CUET is to set a minimum benchmark for entering the university system, as there is a problem with normalising the multiple boards' school leaving exams. With the problem associated with multiple-choice exams, the purpose isn't served.

One can counter that computer-based MCQ exams are the global standard, but there is a key difference. These international exams use a statistical approach to assess the student's ability using the item response theory, taking into account the guessing parameter, item difficulty, and item discrimination.

One can also argue that a simple solution to the guessing problem in NEET and CUET is to increase the negative mark. But a much better solution would be to rethink the drawbacks of these tests and consider returning to the time-tested system of admission either with only the final school marks or a combination of them with entrance exam scores.

Biden's decision

Joe Biden's move to pull out from the presidential elections is surprising. His sudden withdrawal is acceptable on health grounds, though his exit is hard to digest. Immigration policy

There seems to be no coherence between the INDI Alliance partners. PM tears into 'negative approach' of Oppn

Ahead of Budget session of Parliament, Modi accuses Opposition parties of repeatedly 'muzzling the govt's voice'

RAJESH KUMAR THAKUR @ New Delhi

PM Narendra Modi addresses the media ahead of the Budget session| SHEKHAR YADAV

ON the first day of the monsoon session, Prime Minister Narendra Modi slammed the Opposition parties for their "negative approach" and said they repeatedly muzzled the government's voice.

He was addressing the media ahead of the budget session on Monday. "Due to negative approach of some political parties, many Parliamentarians could not get the opportunity to put forward their views and the issues about their constituencies," he said.

Reminding the people how efforts were made earlier to silence the elected government and PM's speech in Parliament, Modi asserted, "The muzzling of the elected government and its prime minister has no place in democratic traditions".

He emphasised that this House (Parliament) is not meant for political parties. "It is not meant to serve the Parliamentarians but 140 crore citizens of India", he added.

Terming the upcoming budget by a third-term government a "glorious event," he said that it would set the direction of the current government's next five years and lay a strong foundation for the dream of 'Viksit-Bharat' by 2047.

Urging the MPs to work in unison for the next 4.5 years, PM Modi said, "Rise above party politics and show your commitment to the nation using the dignified platform of Parliament. Till 2029, our only priority should be the country, its poor, women and the youth".

Flaying the Opposition for boycotting the inauguration of the new Parliament building, PM Modi said, "In the inaugural session of the newly built Parliament, we witnessed unprecedented disruption. The voice of the government, elected by a mandate of 140 crore people, was repeatedly silenced. This disruption impacted the government's ability to fulfill its duties and respond to the people's expectations".

Making an emotional appeal to all MPs, Modi said, "I would like to request the MPs that since January, we have fought enough battles with all our might for our respective parties and conveyed to the people whatever we had to. Some tried to show the way, while some misled. Now it's time to work for the nation unitedly".

He said, "We must remember that Parliament is not for any 'dal' (party) but for 'desh' (country). We must shed negativity to embrace a constructive approach and honour the temple of democracy".

The PM went on to add that the elected representatives, who fought for their respective parties, should fight for the country and strive for its development in the next five years.

"2029 will be an election year, so you can go to the poll field and even use Parliament for it. Play the games you want for those six months, but till then, work to empower the poor, farmers, youth and women by building a movement of people's participation to fulfill the dream of 2047," he added.

Crucial Cong meet to firm up House strategy

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ New Delhi

TOP Congress leaders on Monday held a meeting at the residence of Parliamentary Party chairperson Sonia Gandhi to discuss their strategy for the Monsoon Session, and decided to strongly raise issues related to the NEET-UG paper leak case, Agniveer scheme and Manipur violence, sources said.

Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge, Leader of Opposition in Lok Sabha Rahul Gandhi, chief whip in Rajya Sabha Jairam Ramesh, among others, were present during the party's Parliament Strategy Group meeting at Sonia Gandhi's 10 Janpath residence here.

"We have decided that we will raise the issue of farmers, Agniveer and NEET. We believe that we will put forward these issues in the Business Advisory Committee meetings of the two Houses. We also want that the discussion on selected ministries should be on issues connected with people," Tiwari said.

Sources said the party has also resolved to raise the issue of internal security situation in Jammu and Manipur.

'Oppn is trying to create rift between Hindus & Muslims'

Jamal Siddiqui, the national president of the BJP's Minority Morcha, welcomed the Supreme Court's interim stay on directives passed by the UP and Uttarakhand governments that eateries along the Kanwar Yatra route must display names of owners. He, however, tells Rajesh Kumar Thakur that the measure was actually meant to ensure transparency and emphasised the importance of adherence to regulations during the religious pilgrimage. Excerpts:

What is your reaction to the SC's interim order?

I welcome it, yet still defend the UP government. The government order that all shopkeepers of eateries along the Kanwar routes should display the names of owners on their shops was not against the interests or liberty of the Muslim community. However, the Congress and other Opposition parties have raised a controversy to create a rift between Hindu and Muslim communities for their vested political motives. Did any Muslim go to court against the order? Did any Muslim protest? The Opposition wants to create fear psychosis in the Muslim community.

Verbatim

These parties say the government's move is against the Muslim community and is bound to create a sense of alienation among them.

The Muslim community has started looking through the hidden intention of the Congress or other parties, including the TMC. They are not into politics for the prosperity or welfare of the Muslims ever since the country got Independence. They wanted to create a controversy on the Kanwar Yatra in order to create doubts among Hindus about Muslims. The controversy is aimed at damaging the 'Ganga-Jamuna tahzeeb.' I appeal to Muslims to display their names at eateries put up along the Kanwar Yatra route. The UP directive is aimed at ensuring transparency and the sanctity of the yatra, which is a kind of 'pavitra-anushthan' (holy ritual) for which sanctity must be protected by all irrespective of caste or creed.

TMC MP Mahua Moitra went to the SC against the UP government order while some other MPs have termed it unconstitutional. Don't you think they stand for the rights of Muslims?

Mahua Moitra's move is clearly political. She cannot be the conscience-keeper of Muslims. As a Muslim, I know not a single member of my community opposed the directive. People like Mahua Moitra want to keep Muslims scared of the BJP. Muslims, as far as I know, have had no problem in displaying their names on eateries or shops.

How would react to the comments of Leader of Opposition in West Benghal Assembly Suvendu Adhikari that the party's slogan of 'sab ka sath, sab ka vikas' should be replaced with 'jo hamare sath, hum unke sath' (those with us, we are with them)?

The party has already rejected Suvendu Adhikari's argument. The BJP does not discriminate on the basis of religion or caste. 'Sab ka saath' is the essence of PM Narendra Modi's vision for 'Viksit-Bharat'. This is the soul of India and BJP's politics.

PM's 'Nai-Manzil scheme is meant to uplift the minority youth. Over 1 lakh youth have been its beneficiaries and ₹562.39 crore have been allotted to this scheme. The list of schemes launched for the welfare of minority communities during the NDA government is the longest.

As the BJP Minority Morcha chief, what will you do in support of the UP government's directive despite the SC order?

We honour the SC's interim order. But, as members of Minority Morcha, will go to Muzaffarnagar displaying our names and serve the Kanwariyas during the yatra, giving a message of social amity. After all, why should Muslims hide their names while running their small businesses?

The Opposition believes that Muslims and other minority communities dislike BJP...

This is 100% false. Had it been true, the BJP Minority Morcha could not have been able to make 22 lakh 'Modi-Mitras'. We have also linked up with 14,000 sufis across the country.

RSS says never asked for lifting ban on govt staff joining Sangh activities

PREETHA NAIR @ New Delhi

AFTER a row erupted over the Centre's order on lifting the ban on government employees to participate in Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh (RSS) activities, the Sangh sources said that it never demanded the government to remove the ban which was in force since 1966.

Union minister and BJP leader Piyush Goyal alleged that the ban was driven by political reasons and that the Congress has always had a negative mindset towards nationalist organisations.

Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge said, "By lifting the ban on government employees from participating in RSS activities, Modi wants to politicise government offices and employees on ideological basis."

Posting a photo grab of an order issued by the Department of Personnel and Training (DoPT) on July 9, Congress leader Jairam Ramesh said the 58-year ban was in force even during Atal Bihari Vajpayee's tenure as PM.

"Sardar Patel had banned the RSS in February 1948 following Gandhi's assassination. Subsequently, the ban was withdrawn on assurances of good behaviour. Even after this the RSS never flew the Tiranga in Nagpur," Ramesh said.

"In 1966, a ban was imposed — and rightly so — on government employees taking part in RSS activities. After June 4 2024, relations between the PM and the RSS have nosedived," Ramesh said.

RSS spokesperson Sunil Ambekar, said the move will strengthen the country's democratic system. "The decision of the government is appropriate and strengthens the democratic system of India," he said.

NEET-UG: SC asks IIT-D to form team on Physics answer

SUCHITRA KALYAN MOHANTY @ New Delhi

THE Supreme Court on Monday ordered the IIT-Delhi Director to form a team of three physics experts to determine the correct answer for a Physics question in the NEET-UG exam and to report their findings by Tuesday noon.

A three-judge bench, led by Chief Justice D.Y. Chandrachud and including Justices J.B. Pardiwala and Manoj Misra, issued this order following petitions that claimed one option was correct according to the old NCERT syllabus, while another option was correct under the new syllabus.

It sought to clarify the issue and determine which option was correct. The matter is scheduled for further hearing tomorrow, when the NTA and the Centre will present their submissions to the court.

The NTA, acknowledging that both options were correct, awarded marks for either option. The SC's order came after hearing petitions from students challenging the decision.

The hearing on these petitions, which also allege paper leaks and malpractices, will continue on July 23, Tuesday.

Several petitioners argued that the NEET-UG exam was conducted without proper procedures, describing it as a "complete systemic failure" with no address verification or CCTV monitoring.

Senior lawyer Narendra Hooda, representing petitioners said, "There was no address verification, no CCTV monitoring at any locations."

Ex-minister's son gets bail in Kheri case

SUCHITRA KALYAN MOHANTY @ New Delhi

THE Supreme Court on Monday granted bail to former Union minister Ajay Mishra's son Ashish Mishra in the 2021 Lakhimpur Kheri violence case that claimed eight lives, and restricted his movement to Delhi or Lucknow.

A two-judge Bench, led by Justice Surya Kant and Justice Ujjal Bhuyan, also granted bail to farmers and directed the trial court to expedite the hearing. "We direct the trial court to fix the schedule, keeping in view the pendency of other time-bound or urgent matters but prioritising the pending subject," it said.

Eight persons were allegedly killed after violence broke out in the Lakhimpur Kheri district during a protest against the Centre's farm laws.

Rural distress: Bihar, UP used less NREGA funds than states with lower poverty levels

PREETHA NAIR @ New Delhi

THE Economic Survey tabled by Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman in the Lok Sabha on Monday stated that the demand under the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme (MGNREGS) is not a real indicator of rural distress.

The report says that there is a marked variation in the performance of the MGNREGS across states. However, a state's institutional capacity is crucial for effectively tapping MGNREGS funds.

"Multiple research studies have been conducted to find a definite cause for such unevenness in outcomes, but a satisfactory explanation has not been found. Some reports suggest that MGNREGS demand is indicative of rural distress. If this is indeed the case, then data trends should show that states with more poverty and higher unemployment rates use more scheme funds and generate more employment per-day," it said.

Additionally, there might be a correlation between MGNREGS fund usage and reduced unemployment, it said.

"Additionally, calculations reveal that there is little correlation between MGNREGS fund usage and rural unemployment rates," it noted. "It is evident from the data that MGNREGS work demand does not directly correlate with increased rural distress at a micro level," it said.

The Survey said, "States with lower per-capita incomes and higher poverty levels often have weaker institutions, thereby tapping fewer funds per work executed and generating less employment per capita for the rural poor."

It points out that in FY24, Tamil Nadu, which has less than 1% of the country's poor population, accounted for nearly 15% of all MGNREGS funds released. Similarly, Kerala, with only 0.1% of the poor population, used almost 4% of the nation's MGNREGS funds. These two states together generated 51 crore person-days of employment. In contrast, Bihar and UP, with about 45% (20% and 25% respectively) of the poor population, accounted for only 17% (6% and 11% respectively) of MGNREGA funds and generated 53 crore person-days of employment.

However, Nikhil Dey of NREGA Sangharsh Morcha told this paper that the Economic Survey shows that the states that have better administration can also make use of MGNREGS in a better way. "Bihar and Uttar Pradesh accounted for only 17% because they are states with poor administrative deliveries. It doesn't show that there is no rural distress," he said.

Nikhil Dey of NREGA Sangharsh Morcha told this paper that the Economic Survey shows that the states that have better admin can also make use of MGNREGS in a better way. "Bihar and Uttar Pradesh accounted for only 17% because they are states with poor delivery mechanism," he said.

Defence production shoots up: India now among top 25 arms exporting nations

MAYANK SINGH @ New Delhi

INDIA'S rising production of defence equipment and systems is changing its narrative as the world's second-largest arms importer. The Economic Survey 2024 highlights that India's defence production grew substantially from ₹74,054 crore in FY17 to ₹108,684 crore in FY23, boosting defence exports.

Between 2015 and 2019, India was known as the world's second-largest arms importer. However, the narrative has shifted, as detailed in the Economic Survey. It states, "India has transitioned from being an arms importer to securing a place in the list of the top 25 arms-exporting nations."

The survey credits the defence industry's efforts, including those of private sectors and Defence Public Sector Undertakings (DPSUs), for achieving the highest-ever defence exports. Additionally, there has been a rise in the number of export authorizations issued to defence exporters.

"In FY23, there were 1,414 export authorizations, which increased to 1,507 in FY24. About 100 domestic companies are exporting a wide range of defence products and equipment, including aircraft like Dornier-228, artillery guns, BrahMos Missiles, Pinaka rockets and launchers, radars, simulators, and armoured vehicles," the survey reports.

To boost defence exports, the government has implemented several policy initiatives over the past ten years. Export procedures have been simplified and made industry-friendly, with end-to-end online export authorization reducing delays and facilitating ease of business. Further, the Aatmanirbhar Bharat initiatives have encouraged indigenous design, development, and manufacture of defence equipment, thereby reducing dependency on imports in the long run.

The policy push towards indigenization includes lists of items that will cease to be imported in a staggered timeline. Additionally, the government is allocating funds to support private manufacturers in the defence sector.

However, despite the push for self-reliance, India remains the top arms importer, indicating its dependence on imported arms and equipment.

The Sweden-based Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI) reported in March 2024, "India's arms imports increased by 4.7 percent between 2014-18 and 2019-23. Although Russia remained India's main arms supplier (accounting for 36 percent of its arms imports), this was the first five-year period since 1960-64 when deliveries from Russia (or the Soviet Union prior to 1991) made up less than half of India's arms imports.

Stripped of forest portfolio, minister likely to quit in MP

ANURAAG SINGH @ Bhopal

WITH only seven months into office, the Dr Mohan Yadav-led BJP government in Madhya Pradesh, was in for a surprise on Monday morning.

Upset over being divested of the key forest and environment ministry portfolio on Sunday, the first-time cabinet minister and fourth-time tribal MLA Nagarsingh Chouhan (who is now left with just scheduled caste welfare ministry) said he was contemplating to quit as a minister soon.

Considered close to former MP CM and current union agriculture minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan, the Alirajpur-ST seat legislator Chouhan further said even his first-time Lok Sabha member wife Anita Nagarsingh Chouhan (who won the Ratlam-ST seat defeating Congress veteran Kantilal Bhuria by 2.07 lakh votes) may quit her Parliament membership in the coming days.

"Being a tribal face, I was inducted into the council of ministers as forest and environment, SC welfare minister. I could serve the tribal cause best in the capacity of forest and environment minister. But all of a sudden, someone who came from the Congress (six-times former Congress MLA Ramniwas Rawat) was assigned the key portfolio, leaving me with the SC welfare ministry only, through which I can hardly work for tribal cause," Chouhan told journalists from his home district Alirajpur in western MP.

"I've been working with the BJP since 25 years, when there was none in Alirajpur district to even carry the party's flag. I'm particularly disappointed with Sunday's development, as a Congress leader has been rewarded at the cost of being a grass root BJP worker. Also, I was kept in the dark in the matter by the government and the party leadership, which has further hurt me. Being a minister is not a must for me to serve my people, I can serve them by merely remaining an MLA," said Chouhan.

The state BJP, however, downplayed the development. Its MLA Bhagwandas Sabnani said Chouhan and his wife have been working for the party for a long time. If there are any issues, they will be put before the partym and resolved soon."

Raj govt moves SC to withdraw suit on phone tapping

Contends case's merit
In a recent submission to the Supreme Court, the Bhajanlal government contended that the case lacked merit and could not proceed further. This marks a reversal of the state's earlier stance under Gehlot. The issue has been a part of a broader political crisis stemming from an audio released by Gehlot's OSD in 2020

RAJESH ASNANI @ Jaipur

IN a significant turn of events, the Bhajanlal-led BJP government in Rajasthan has decided to withdraw a case filed in the Supreme Court against the Central government on the 2020 phone tapping allegations. The move is being seen as a major setback to former CM Ashok Gehlot, whose administration initially filed the case to stop the Delhi Police's investigation into the matter.

The controversy goes back to March 2021, when Union Minister Gajendra Singh Shekhawat lodged a complaint with the Delhi Crime Branch, alleging illegal phone-tapping by the Gehlot government. This prompted the Gehlot administration to approach the Supreme Court arguing that only the Rajasthan Police had the jurisdiction over the investigation and sought a stay on Delhi Police's actions.

However, in a recent submission to the Supreme Court, the Bhajanlal-led BJP government has contended that the case lacked merit and could not proceed further. This marks a reversal of the state's earlier stance under Gehlot's leadership. The issue has been a part of a broader political crisis in Rajasthan stemming from an audio clip released by Lokesh Sharma, Gehlot's OSD in 2020 which implicated political figures who were allegedly conspiring to topple the Gehlot government.

The clip featured conversations involving Union Minister Gajendra Singh Shekhawat, a Congress MLA, and a rather notorious broker in Rajasthan. After the Congress government fell in December last year, former OSD Lokesh Sharma accused Gehlot of leaking the audio recordings and pressured him to destroy evidence.

SUDHIR SURYAWANSHI @ Mumbai

AMID reports of tension between the Maratha and OBC communities in some parts of Maharashtra, former NCP (SP) chief Sharad Pawar met Chief Minister Eknath Shinde on Monday and held a closed door meeting for more than 90 minutes.

Although both sides were silent on the details of the meeting, the Shiv Sena released a brief statement stating Pawar and Shinde had an in-depth discussion on various issues, including water resources, milk prices, and some pending matters related to sugar factories. NCP minister and OBC leader Chhagan Bhujbal had met Pawar at his residence Silver Oak and urged him to intervene and repair the social fabric of the state. Bhujbal said only Pawar could help bridge the gap between the communities. "Neither the CM nor any minister has that ability," Bhujbal said.

"Since only he has capacity to resolve any social issue, I expect him to step in and resolve the ongoing conflict," Bhujbal said. On his part, Pawar said he was not aware of any assurance being given to either of the community leaders. "The government has been talking with both sides, so first we should be informed about these dialogues in detail; we may then move forward," Pawar said. Meanwhile, Maratha quota leader Manoj Jarange Patil has alleged that BJP is against the caste and reservations to it. Patil has been on hunger strike for three days.

He said he had some expectations from PM Modi, "When Modi came to Shirdi last year, he had let it be known that he accepted the demand for Maratha quota. But we have not heard from him ever since." In another related development, state minister Dhananjay Munde on Monday questioned Patil's aggressive stand on quota and asked if it was a deliberate attempt to prevent the state from taking proper decisions.

Raising the issue, Lohardaga MP Sukhdeo Bhagat termed it a sensitive issue and a question of tribal identity. Bhagat demanded that the Sarna religion code be mentioned separately in the census column. Sarna religion should be included to protect their faith, tradition and culture, he said.

Terror attack on Rajouri house of Shaurya Chakra awardee

FAYAZ WANI @ Srinagar

A week after four Army men, including a Captain, were killed in an encounter with militants in mountainous Doda district, militants on Monday struck in J&K's border district of Rajouri by attacking the house of Shaurya Chakra awardee Village Defence Committee (VDC) member Purshotam Kumar in a remote village, triggering a gunfight with the Army.

A soldier and relative of the VDC member were injured in the militant firing. The militant attack took place two days after Army Chief General Upendra Dwivedi visited Jammu and reviewed the security arrangements amid a surge in militant attacks in the region.

A Jammu-based defence spokesman said terrorists fired upon the house of a VDC member at village Gunda in Budhal area of Rajouri at 3.10 am. Immediately after the attack, Army men posted in the nearby camp rushed to the spot and engaged militants in gunfire, he said. In the firing, an Army man sustained bullet injuries. A civilian identified as Vijay Kumar, who was a relative of the VDC member, also sustained minor injuries.

Additional Army, police and paramilitary were rushed to the village and security men launched search operations in the village and adjoining villages to track down the militants. Sources said two-three militants were involved in the attack and a manhunt to track them down is going on. The VDC member, whose house was attacked by militants, was identified as Purshotam Kumar, a Shaurya Chakra awardee.

Purshotam, a Village Defense Committee (VDC) member, was instrumental in killing two militants in Kalakote area of Rajouri last year. He had provided information to security forces about the presence of militants and also participated in an anti-militancy operation during which two militants were killed.

He was recently awarded Shaurya Chakra for his bravery by President Droupadi Murmu. In view of the militant threat, the Army had recently set up an army camp near the house of a VDC member.

The government has revived Village Defence Committees (VDCs) under the name of "Village Defence Groups" (VDGs) after the surge in militant violence in the Jammu region.

Heat on Assam govt for action over elephant carcass burial inside refinery

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @ Guwahati

PRESSURE is mounting on the Assam government to initiate action in the case involving the burial of an adult wild elephant carcass inside the Numaligarh Refinery Limited (NRL) township in the Golaghat district.
A police complaint was lodged on Monday, a day after the locals staged a protest demanding action.

In his complaint, a student leader Pintu Gogoi, apprised the Golaghat superintendent of police that the local police station did not initiate any action even after the incident was brought to its notice. He warned of legal recourse if the police continued to ignore the incident. Well-known biodiversity organisation Aaranyak also demanded action.

The cow elephant was electrocuted at the Butterfly Park located inside the NRL Township on July 18 and later, some staff buried it in the refinery's complex.

The forest department, which was informed about the incident on July 18 evening, exhumed the carcass on July 19, followed by a post-mortem. The forest department has registered a case under the Wildlife (Protection) Act and is conducting a probe. Senior forest officials could not be reached to learn the status of the investigation.

Aaranyak, a member of the State Board of Wildlife, Assam and former member of National Board of Wildlife, expressed deep concern and outrage on the incident. "This tragic event is a stark reminder of the ongoing threats faced by elephants in their natural habitat, particularly in the Golaghat district, which is part of a critical elephant corridor," Aaranyak said in a statement.

"Reports indicate that the elephant died due to suspected electrocution after coming into contact with an exposed power cable...What is even more shocking is the refinery authorities buried the carcass without notifying the forest department in gross violation of Wildlife (Protection) Act, 1972," the organisation said.

The organisation said the forest department needed to ensure accountability for those responsible to deter such violations in future. "It is essential to implement stricter safety measures," it added.

Aerial solution to save crops from antelopes in MP

ANURAAG SINGH @ Bhopal

A potential aerial solution is being developed to protect farmers' crops from antelopes and subsequently furnish an ideal prey base for predator felines, including African cheetahs, in Madhya Pradesh.

The state forest department has issued a tender for hiring a helicopter, which will be used to chase and drive herds of blackbucks (who are damaging farmers' crops) into specially created bomas (enclosures) and then translocate them to replenish the prey base of feline predators, including African cheetahs, tigers, and leopards.

Experts from South Africa, key partners in the ongoing Cheetah reintroduction project in Madhya Pradesh, will assist with this initiative.

If all goes as planned, the helicopter-driven translocation of blackbucks will start after the monsoon season in western Madhya Pradesh's Shajapur district, which is among the areas where crops are significantly damaged by nilgais (blue bulls) and blackbucks.

Tender has been floated to rent helicopters
A senior state forest department official confirmed that a tender has already been floated to rent helicopters. The helicopter-driven Boma technique will first be implemented in Shajapur district, approximately 260 km from the Gandhi Sagar Wildlife Sanctuary.

A senior state forest department official confirmed that a tender has already been floated to rent helicopters. The helicopter-driven boma technique will first be implemented in Shajapur district, approximately 260 km from the Gandhi Sagar Wildlife Sanctuary.

This sanctuary, located on the Madhya Pradesh-Rajasthan border, is likely to become the second home for African cheetahs in India.

"Experts from South Africa, who have successfully used the same helicopter-driven boma capture-relocation technique for cheetahs in their country, will first demonstrate the technique in a pilot phase in Shajapur district. Using the helicopter, herds of blackbucks will be located in areas where they have been damaging crops. The herds will then be chased into specially created bomas and subsequently transported as prey base to national parks, sanctuaries, and tiger reserves for the big feline predators," an official said.

Forest department staff will receive training in this tranquilization-free capture-relocation process under the supervision of the National Tiger Conservation Authority (NTCA). If the pilot project yields the desired results, the technique is likely to be replicated in other districts where blackbucks and nilgais (blue bulls) are wreaking havoc on farmers' crops. Districts where the two antelope varieties could be captured and relocated include Ujjain, Harda, Dhar, Agar-Malwa, Vidisha, Guna, Ashok Nagar, and Shivpuri.

Kamala gets Pelosi's backing, raises $50 mn in a day

With just over 100 days left for the election day, she has to quickly lock in her nomination and pick a running mate

WASHINGTON

VICE President Kamala Harris moved swiftly on Monday to lock up Democratic delegates behind her campaign for the White House after President Joe Biden stepped aside amid concerns from within their party that he would be unable to defeat Republican Donald Trump. Aiming to put weeks of intraparty drama over Biden's candidacy behind them, prominent Democratic elected officials, party leaders and political organisations quickly lined up behind Harris in the hours after Biden announced he was dropping his reelection campaign. Biden's departure frees his delegates to vote for whomever they choose.

Harris, whom Biden backed after ending his candidacy, is thus far the only declared candidate and was working to quickly secure endorsements from a majority of delegates.

Additional endorsements on Monday, including Maryland Gov Wes Moore, Michigan Gov. Gretchen Whitmer, Illinois Gov J B Pritzker and Kentucky Gov Andy Beshear, left a dwindling list of potential rivals to Harris. Speaker Emerita Nancy Pelosi, who had been one of the notable holdouts to Harris, initially encouraging a primary to strengthen the eventual nominee, endorsed Harris on Monday. Pelosi said she was lending her 'enthusiastic support' to Harris' effort to lead the party.

More than 700 pledged delegates have announced that they plan to support Harris at the convention, which is over one-third of the pledged delegates she needs in order to clinch the nomination. Democratic National Committee rules most recently set 1,976 pledged delegates as the benchmark to win the nomination.

Winning the nomination is only the first item on a staggering political to-do list for her after Biden's decision to exit the race, which she learned about on a Sunday morning call with the president. If she's successful at locking up the nomination, she must also pick a running mate and pivot a massive political operation to boost her candidacy instead of Biden's with just over 100 days until Election Day.

Harris will be inheriting Biden's political operation and a war chest of $96 million. Harris had raised $49.6 million in donations in the first 15 hours after Biden's endorsement. AP

Panel to look into assassination attempt

Washington: US Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas has appointed a bipartisan, independent panel to review this month's assassination attempt on former President Donald Trump, officials said. The panel members will have 'extensive law enforcement and security experience to conduct a 45-day independent review of the planning for and actions taken by the US Secret Service and state and local authorities.

Gabbard says Harris represents deep state

Washington: Kamala Harris is the 'new figurehead for the deep state' and would be 'incredibly dangerous' as the commander-in-chief, former congressman Tulsi Gabbard said. Gabbard also asked countrymen to vote for Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump. "Biden's out, Kamala is in. Don't be fooled: policies won't change. Just like Biden wasn't the one calling the shots, Kamala Harris won't be either," she said in a video post.

Biden's decision to quit reached in 48 hrs: CNN

REHOBOTH BEACH

BIDEN's final decision to leave the race was reached in the last 48 hours, a senior campaign adviser said, as he consulted family and top advisers by telephone while recovering from Covid, CNN reported. A source familiar with the matter said the plans to exit the race began on Saturday night and were finalised on Sunday.

The adviser said the president "was not dug in" but was studying the data coming in and became convinced he would weigh down the ticket and be a complication to defeating Trump.

Biden's decision did not have to do with any medical issues, a senior White House official said. When the president huddled with his two closest advisers on Saturday, the information they provided on polling and where top Democratic officials stood underscored that a path to victory was nonexistent, according to another person familiar with the matter.

There wasn't any single poll number, wavering Democratic official or fundraiser presented in the meeting with longtime aides Mike Donilon and Steve Ricchetti that pushed Biden toward his decision, the person said. Instead, the information highlighted that the path back to a viable campaign had been severely damaged by declining national and swing-state poll numbers, along with party defections that were likely to rapidly accelerate.

Biden made clear before the end of the meeting that he was planning to pull out of the race and asked his aides to start drafting the letter he posted Sunday afternoon and preparing the plans for the rollout.

RUNNING MATE CHOICES

JOSH SHAPIRO

Shapiro is halfway through his second year as Pennsylvania's governor after easily winning his last election by trouncing a far-right, Trump-endorsed candidate. Shapiro, 51, has been a surrogate for Biden, backing the president in appearances on cable networks, and has years of experience making Trump the focus of his attacks, first as state attorney general and now as governor. In one recent MSNBC appearance, he said Trump should 'quit whining' and stop 'sh' talking America'. Shapiro is Jewish.

ROY COOPER

The North Carolina governor has won six statewide general elections over two decades in a state where Republicans routinely prevail in similar federal races and also control the legislature. Cooper, 67, has received strong job-approval ratings as governor, benefiting from a booming state economy for which his administration and lawmakers take credit. He also portrays himself as a fighter for public education and abortion rights. Cooper was elected attorney general in 2000, a position he held for 16 years.

ANDY BESHEAR

The Kentucky governor secured his reputation as a rising party star by beating Donald Trump-endorsed candidates in a Republican stronghold. Beshear displayed a disciplined, tenacious style in winning reelection last year by defeating then-Attorney General Daniel Cameron. The governor has urged Democrats to follow his winning formula by focusing on the everyday concerns of Americans, from good-paying jobs to quality education and health care. He won widespread praise for his empathy in guiding the State through the pandemic.

MARK KELLY

The Arizona senator leveraged his career as an astronaut to build a brand as a moderate in a state that long supported Republicans. In his two campaigns the first in 2020 to finish the term of the late Republican Sen. John McCain and the second two years later for a full term Kelly has earned more votes than any other Democrat on the ballot. He outpolled Biden, who narrowly won Arizona, by 2 percentage points in 2020. Kelly's first turn in the national political spotlight came when wife Gabrielle Giffords was shot in the head.

Won't yield to Chinese bullying: Philippines prez

MANILA

THE Philippines "cannot yield" in territorial disputes, President Ferdinand Marcos said on Monday, after a series of escalating confrontations with Beijing in the South China Sea.

Manila is locked in a long-standing territorial row with Beijing over parts of the strategic waterway through which trillions of dollars worth of trade passes annually.

Ferdinand Marcos

Without naming China, Marcos said the Philippines would continue to "find ways to de-escalate tensions in contested areas... without compromising our position and our principles".

"The Philippines cannot yield. The Philippines cannot waver," Marcos said in his annual State of the Nation address to Congress. His remarks came after the Philippines and China agreed to a "provisional arrangement" for resupply missions to Filipino troops stationed at Second Thomas Shoal, which has been the focus of violent clashes in recent months. Beijing claims almost the entire South China Sea and asserts its stance by deploying coast guard and other vessels to patrol the disputed waters and reefs. Philippine relations with China have been turbulent since Marcos took office in 2022 vowing to defend his country's claims to the South China Sea. A series of clashes between Philippine and Chinese vessels have fuelled fears of a conflict that could drag in the US. AFP

Protest paused, student leader says they didn't want bloodshed

DHAKA

THE Bangladeshi student group leading demonstrations that have spiralled into deadly violence, suspended protests on Monday for 48 hours, with its leader saying they had not wanted reform "at the expense of so much blood".

What began as demonstrations against politicised admission quotas for sought-after government jobs snowballed into some of the worst unrest of Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina's tenure. A curfew has been imposed and soldiers are patrolling cities across the South Asian country, while a nationwide internet blackout since Thursday has drastically restricted the flow of information.

Nahid Islam

The streets of the capital Dhaka remained largely quiet Monday, and the army chief said the law and order situation had been brought "under control" since the military was deployed.

Nahid Islam, leader of the main protest organiser Students Against Discrimination, said, "We are suspending the shutdown protests for 48 hours." Nahid said he was hospitalised after being beaten by people he claimed were undercover police. "We demand that during this period the government withdraws the curfew, restores the internet and stops targeting the student protesters." On Sunday, the Supreme Court pared back the number of reserved jobs for specific groups, including the descendants of "freedom fighters" from Bangladesh's 1971 liberation war against Pakistan. "We started this movement for reforming the quota," Nahid said.

"But we did not want quota reform at the expense of so much blood, so much killing, so much damage to life and property." At least 163 people have died in clashes, including several police officers by police and hospitals. AFP

Gazans flee Khan Younis after Israel orders evac of safe zone

KHAN YOUNIS

HUNDREDS of panicked Gazans fled after the Israeli military on Monday ordered the evacuation of part of a humanitarian zone, warning it was preparing to launch an operation in the area.

The military had declared Al-Mawasi, along the Gaza coast between the cities of Khan Younis and Rafah, a humanitarian zone in May, and told Palestinians to go there for their own safety.

But it has now ordered people to leave part of the zone in eastern Khan Younis that it says militants have been using to launch attacks on Israeli targets. The military said the evacuation was due to "significant terrorist activity and rocket fire toward the state of Israel from the eastern part of the humanitarian area", making it too "dangerous" to remain.In a statement, it urged people to relocate from eastern Khan Younis to the west of the "adjusted humanitarian area of Al-Mawasi" that runs along the Gaza coast.

Many Gazans are hesitant to join the swelling tent camps in Al-Mawasi, however, after a recent attack on the zone killed at least 92 people and wounded more than 300, according to figures from the health ministry in the Hamas-run territory.

"No place is safe," said Yussef Abu Taimah, from the town of Al-Qarara in Khan Younis, as he prepared to relocate his family for the fourth time since the Gaza war broke out in October. "We left in the middle of ongoing air and tank shelling, and drones firing shots," said the 27-year-old, who witnessed dead and wounded people being transported to Nasser Hospital by tuk-tuks and donkey carts. Abu Taimah said his family was heading to Al-Mawasi, but expected to find no space in the crowded, makeshift encampment. AFP

Firefighting teams appear to have made little progress, with the blaze seemingly expanding in some parts of the port, amid fears it could reach food storage facilities.

Mkt may remain volatile on Budget day; brokerage warns of 10% correction

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ New Delhi

DOMESTIC equity market is expected to witness increased volatility on the Budget Day (July 23) even as the central government is likely to keep its focus on fiscal prudence and capital expenditure-led growth.

Equity market benchmarks on Monday closed in red for two straight sessions. The Nifty50 plunged sharply in the morning and closed the day 22 points lower at 24,509.25. The BSE Sensex also gyrated in the wide range and closed the day 103 points lower at 80,502.08.

"After a sharp fall in early trades, markets were in a recovery mode and ended with marginal losses on profit-taking in banking, IT and realty stocks. Investors traded with caution as nervousness gripped them ahead of Budget. However, markets could see volatility during the Budget announcement on Tuesday, and one may see sector-based action," said Prashanth Tapse, Senior VP (Research), Mehta Equities.

The markets on Monday reacted to the minutes of the Economic Survey 2024, which highlighted the resilience of the Indian economy and projected continued strong growth in financial year 2025. It called out the private sector to create more jobs and highlighted growing retail participation in the market is a matter of concern as they expect higher returns without real market conditions.

Vinod Nair, research head, Geojit Financial Services, said the conservative economic growth forecast for FY25, presented in the survey, has introduced some spikes in volatility ahead of the Budget. Further, he said the below-estimated Q1 results from certain index heavyweights like RIL had added to apprehensions of a slowdown in earnings growth in FY25. RIL shares fell 3.5% to close at ₹3,001 a piece.

Meanwhile, domestic brokerage Emkay Global warned investors that a 5-10% fall in Sensex and Nifty. The correction can be sharper in smallcap and midcap stocks, it added.

"We see the risk of an imminent 5-10% correction in the headline indices, with bigger drawdowns in small and midcap stocks. Nifty valuations are stretched at 21.4x 1YF PER, and a positive budget is now in the price. There are no additional positive catalysts, as we expect a tepid 1QFY25 earning season with rate cuts coming only at end-CY24," Seshadri Sen, Head Of Research, Emkay Global, told investors in a note.

Eco survey warns against F&O trade

No place for speculative trade as any potential fall in mkts can make investors feel 'cheated'

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ Mumbai

THE Economic Survey report presented on Monday said speculative trading has "no place in a developing country like ours" and such retail traders often end up losing money than eking out some profit.

At the same time, the survey warns that any potential fall in stock markets can make investors feel "cheated" and deter them from returning to the capital markets for a long time which can be detrimental to the entire economy.

This comes after market watchdog Sebi and the Reserve Bank came down heavily on the rising futures & options (F&O or derivatives) trading by retail investors. A recent Sebi study has quantified the huge losses that retail investors who play in the derivatives market saying over 90% of them heavily lost, to the tune of over ₹1.25 lakh on average.

The Sebi said the retail participation in G&O market was only 2% in FY18, which has soared to 42% as of March 2024 during which time the volume also skyrocketed from ₹210 trillion to over 500 trillion, making the country the world's largest derivatives market with a 76% share, while the turnover in index options in premium terms has gone up from ₹4.5 trillion in FY18 to ₹140 trillion in FY24. Of the total, as much as 95% of the volume is on the NSE, making the bourse the world's largest derivatives exchange.

The market regulator is so worried about the potential risk of this rapidly growing retail participation that it has appointed a committee to suggest measures to bell the derivatives cat. And earlier this month, TNIE had reported that the working committee on F&O had proposed some serious measures to curb the rapid growth in derivatives volume by increasing the minimum lot size of derivative contracts to ₹20-30 lakh from ₹5 lakh now, limiting options trading to weekly per each stock exchange, and limiting the number of strike prices for options contracts among others.

The survey notes, tabled in Parliament on Monday ahead of the Budget Tuesday, that derivatives trading with its potential for higher gains, often appeals to the instinct for gambling and the allure of augmenting income. This dynamic has driven significant retail participation in derivatives trading. But, the reality of derivatives trading is starkly different from its promise, it warns.

Stating that risks inherent in and associated with derivatives trading are not merely theoretical, the survey says a significant market correction can lead to substantial losses, particularly for retail investors engaged in derivatives.

'Go slow on energy transition'

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ New Delhi

INDIA'S energy needs are expected to grow 2 to 2.5 times by 2047 to meet the developmental priorities and aspirations of a growing economy, according to the Economic Survey tabled in Parliament on Monday.

The survey highlights that given the limitations of resources, the pace of the energy transition must account for alternative demands related to climate resilience and sustainable social and economic development. It emphasizes that achieving net-zero emissions by 2070 will require an orderly transition to a diversified energy mix, with a significant share of non-fossil sources and improvements in energy production and efficiency. "Phasing renewable energy into the country's energy mix is paramount in India's drive towards cleaner energy sources," the survey reads.

Economic Survey bats for FDI from China to boost manufacturing

MONIKA YADAV @ New Delhi

INDIA will have to make a choice between allowing cheap Chinese products into India and attracting investment from China if it wants to give boost to manufacturing, the Economic Survey report said departing from a the government's largely anti-China stance.

The survey in clear terms says to boost Indian manufacturing and plug India into the global supply chain, it is inevitable that India plugs itself into China's supply chain. "Whether we do so by relying solely on imports or partially through Chinese investments is a choice that India has to make," it says. Despite being the fastest-growing economy in the G20 and recording growth rates that exceed those of China, India's economy remains a fraction of China's, the Economic Survey highlighted on Monday.

The Chinese domination over the global supply chains across product categories is a key global concern, especially in the wake of supply disruption accompanying the war in Ukraine, the report said.

"Even though India is the fastest-growing G20 country and is now recording growth rates that outpace China's, India's economy is still a fraction of China's," the report added.

In the context of energy transition, the survey said that China's near-monopoly over the production and processing of critical and rare earth minerals has already been a cause of global concern. It will have major repercussions for India's renewable energy programme, which is vulnerable because of its massive dependence on imported raw materials.

As countries attempt to reshore and friendshore, India's policy choices concerning China are exacting, according to the Economic Survey.

India is gaining market share in global exports of goods and services. Its share in global goods exports was 1.8% in FY24, against an average of 1.7% during FY16-20.

Exclude food from inflation targeting

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ New Delhi

THE Economic Survey, tabled in Lok Sabha, on Monday has made a case for changing the inflation targeting framework of the Reserve Bank by excluding food inflation.

It said though the headline inflation rate is largely under control, "inflation rate of some specific food items is elevated". The Survey said food constitutes a very high portion of the consumer price index in developing countries and when central banks target headline inflation, they effectively target food prices. Currently, the RBI's medium-term for headline retail inflation is 4% with a plus or minus 2%.

Food inflation is majorly driven by supply constraints and putting blame on the monetary policy committee for the high food price is unfair, said V Anantha Nageswaran, Chief Economic Advisor.

"Monetary policy is a short-run macro aggregate demand management tool. It is not a tool to manage aggregate supply shock and food shocks are predominantly food supply shocks. So, it is a tool not designed to address that, chief economic advisor said on Monday during media briefing on Economic Survey. And also it is a little unfair to burden the central bank with controlling the inflation when it contains a component which is not under its control," said Nageswaran.

Corp sector should take job generation seriously

ENS ECONOMIC BUREAU @ Bengaluru

THE Economic Survey 2023-24 has called upon the corporate sector to take its share of responsibility to create jobs seriously.

It explores the idea of tripartite compact between private sector, Centre and state governments to deliver on the higher and rising aspirations of Indians and to reboot the mission to skill and equip Indians to catch up with technological evolution. It says employment generation is the real bottom line for the private sector and that job creation happens mainly in the private sector. "In more than one respect, the action lies with the private sector. In terms of financial performance, the corporate sector has never had it so good. Results of a sample of over 33,000 companies show in the three years between FY20 and FY23, the profit before taxes of the Indian corporate sector nearly quadrupled," the survey stated.

"Private sector GFCF (Gross Fixed Capital Formation) in machinery and equipment and intellectual property products has grown cumulatively by only 35% in the four years to FY23. Meanwhile, its GFCF in 'Dwellings, other buildings and structures' has increased by 105%. This is not a healthy mix. The slow pace of investment in M&E and IP Products will delay India's quest to raise the manufacturing share of GDP, delay the improvement in India's manufacturing competitiveness, and create only a smaller number of higher-quality formal jobs than otherwise," it pointed out.

The survey said it is in the interest of the companies to step up hiring and worker compensation. "Corporate sector has a responsibility, as much to itself as it is to society, to think harder about ways AI (artificial intelligence) will augment labour rather than displace workers. Hiring in IT sector has slowed significantly in last two years.

The survey stated that with AI taking roots in several spheres of economic activity, job market must adapt while steering the technological choices towards collective welfare is key. There are over 13,000 DPIIT-recognised start-ups in AI, the Internet of things, robotics, and nanotechnology by the end of FY24.

It said that AI casts a huge pall of uncertainty as to its impact on workers across all skill levels and these will create barriers and hurdles to sustained high growth rates for India in the coming years and decades.

ECONOMIC SURVEY

Recognised start-ups created 12.42 lakh direct jobs

The number of DPIIT recognised start-ups has increased from over 300 in 2016 to 1,17,254, as of December 31, 2023. These recognised start-ups have created over 12.42 lakh direct jobs creating significant economic impact. The survey pointed out that start-ups filed more than 12,000 patent applications from 2016 to March 2024.

As the pandemic fuelled consumer and enterprise demand for technology-backed solutions, the number of technology start-ups in India rose from around 2,000 in 2014 to about 31,000 in 2023.

According to National Association of Software and Service Companies (NASSCOM), the sector witnessed the inception of roughly 1000 new tech start-ups in 2023. The top sectors for start-ups in 2023 were EdTech (16%), EnterpriseTech (12%), BFSI (10%), Advertising and Marketing (7%) and RetailTech (6%).

The Banking, financial services and insurance (BFSI) sector saw a surge in start-ups starting in 2016, driven by the introduction of Unified Payments Interface (UPI).

The demand for scalable and efficient cloud solutions led to the growth of Software as a Service (SaaS) start-ups, resulting in 21 unicorns since 2014, the Survey pointed out. Also, the pandemic accelerated growth in sectors such as HealthTech and EdTech, spurred by the increased need for tele-consulting and remote learning solutions.

Singh set to become first Indian to head OCA

Former international shooter and veteran sports administrator Randhir Singh is set to become the first Indian president of the Olympic Council of Asia (OCA) after emerging as the sole candidate for the top post for the September 8 elections. The 77-year-old Singh was currently serving as the acting chief of the continental sports apex body.

MAN WHO REDEFINED OLY SUCCESS

Abhinav Bindra competed in five Olympics and became the first individual gold medallist from the country at the 2008 Beijing Games. In the process, the shooter showed what was possible . Swaroop Swaminathan speaks to the legend about his stellar career spanning over 16 years and what it takes to achieve the ultimate glory...

IF Leander Paes' Olympic medal in Atlanta started a yearning for quadrennial glory in the world's most prestigious sporting event, Beijing is where the blue touch paper was lit. In the 12 years and three Olympic cycles from Atlanta to Beijing, the glass ceiling hadn't been shattered but it was being pricked and prodded. Abhinav Bindra's medal, the first individual gold at the Games, was a black swan event. Till Beijing, ambition was limited; get to the Games. These days, the ambitions are on another planet; hosting it in the near future. Sixteen years ago, a bespectacled man changed the grammar of Olympic success. In an interview to this daily, Bindra spoke about his career, his learnings, how he changed from Olympics to Olympics and why he had a 'great closure' at the Rio Games. Excerpts:

• Your experiences of shooting on an uneven surface at the Athens Olympics has been well documented. Overall, how did the whole experience of Athens change you?

It changed my approach to shooting. I became completely detached from outcomes because the experience taught me that no matter how much you put in, sometimes the result is not in your control. As an athlete, what you can focus is on being the best you can be and immerse yourself in the process of shooting. That mentality and detachment was borne out of that disappointment and failure at Athens. That changed me as a person. Going into Beijing, much was driven to a great degree of attention to detail but more than that, detachment from outcomes. Much was spoken about the lack of reaction when I won... but I put that down to the detachment. For me, the greatest thrill was my ability to execute when it really mattered. It was my ability to remain in the moment... I do feel that had a significant impact on my performance and outcome (in Beijing). Life is all about failing well. Athens was a failure and it was about from experience and being prepared for every eventuality.

• You speak about your reaction after winning gold. Did you ever think, 'hang on, may be I could have celebrated a bit more?'

Why give out a fake reaction? It was something which was real and it's what I felt. I felt a great amount of inner peace and satisfaction and that is what it's all about. An outward reaction if it's not coming out, why would I want to fake it? I have never thought like that. I have never looked back at the video and thought 'I should have done this or that'.

• Something you did before the final was raid the hotel room's mini bar for a drink. Was it part of any routine?

Definitely not part of any routine. It was something... I'm human, I'm also vulnerable. It's well documented that I had a massive panic attack the night before. The story has gone viral... I didn't win because of the drink.

• When you sat down to write the book, what was that process like?

It was very therapeutic. It was that way primarily because athletes seldom have the luxury and liberty to look back at their career. It was also an opportunity to let go off things I was carrying. It was a great experience and I really enjoyed the process. It was also a great experience to tell my story in a very honest way and to put my vulnerabilities not under the carpet but to actually write about them because I do believe that writing about vulnerabilities is powerful not just to myself but also to other athletes who may gain strength.

• How did you change as a person from Olympics to Olympics?

I competed in five Olympics and in each of them, I was a different person. I had a different strategy, outlook, perspective, motivation and it was a very natural thing to happen. We are humans, we keep changing over time. Our outlooks and perspectives to life change and we have to keep changing. Sometimes, as individuals and athletes, we do make the mistake of trying to live our life in circles, keep repeating what once worked. But that rarely works primarily because it's not just the external things that change in terms of competitions. The most important thing to consider is the internal factors which keep changing. As a 17-year-old in Sydney, I had a certain outlook. At my last Games as a 34-year-old, I had a different outlook to life and sport.

The period between Athens and Beijing was extremely intense and obsessive and it was impossible to keep going in that way. When I won in Beijing, I had different challenges, dealing with success. I had a void the victory had created and it took a while to regain my energy and to find motivation to look at sport again.

• You have had the highest of highs as well as lows? How did you deal with these two opposing results?

As athletes, we learn to deal with it. For me, I don't look at it as wins and losses. If we look at the life of an athlete in that way, you are not going to survive for long. It's the external world which simplifies a sports career by classifying it as wins or losses. For an athlete, it's the journey which is extremely fulfilling and rewarding. You have learnt so much along the way and that is how I look back at my sports career. It's not whether I won a medal or not, that's a very simplistic way of looking at an athlete's career. An athlete's career has much more to offer, much more to it than an outcome from a sports competition. At the Olympics, there are over 10000 competitors. Only 300 go back with gold. What about the other 9700? For an athlete, it's more nuanced (than a win or a loss). For me, frankly, if you look at my last Games in Rio, I finished 4th. It was a great closure to my career because I had given it my all. A medal would have been nice but it's what it's. It was a wonderful closure not because of a medal or no medal but because of the absence of regret and that is a wonderful place for a human being to be at.

• Do you think the Indian sports media are guilty of falling into the trip of framing careers through the prism of wins and losses?

I wouldn't say it's only in India. But that's life. We live in a world which is very outcome driven but I do feel it's changing. I don't follow sports very carefully but in whatever I observe and read, the Indian media is getting more and more interested in showing the life of an athlete, showing what goes behind the athlete's life. They are not just focused on the outcome. That is nice to see. Of course, end of the day, a sports competition is mainly about winning and losing. So, I'm not saying we have to lose focus on that. That will always the primary focus for athletes, fans and media and that's fine. But I think we have to supplement it with the human side of the athletes' life.

As a 17-year-old in Sydney, I had a certain outlook. At my last Games as a 34-year-old, I had a different outlook to life and sport. The period between Athens and Beijing was extremely intense and obsessive and it was impossible to keep going in that way – Abhinav Bindra

Three-member panel to review T20 WC conduct

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE
@Chennai

AFTER their Annual General Body meeting, the International Cricket Council has formed a three-member committee to "review the delivery" of the T20 World Cup which was co-hosted by the USA and the West Indies last month. The committee will involve former New Zealand batter Roger Twose and two other ICC directors Lawson Naidoo and Imran Khwaja.

This move comes after reports of USD 20 million losses incurred during the T20 World Cup in USA and West Indies. Shortly after the event, Pankaj Khimji, one of the Associate Member Directors, had written a letter to all members calling for an audit of the expenses. "The ICC Board confirmed that there will be a review into the delivery of the ICC T20 World Cup. This will be overseen by three directors, Roger Twose, Lawson Naidoo and Imran Khwaja who will report back to the Board later in the year," the world governing body said in a statement.

Among other key decisions taken at the AGM are the expansion of the Women's T20 World Cup. Currently featuring 12 teams, the tournament is set to be expanded to 16 by 2030.

Meanwhile, USA and Chile cricket boards have been formally put on notice and given a year to comply with ICC's Associate Membership criteria.

"Neither Member is considered to have in place a fit for purpose detailed governance and administrative structure and systems. The Board agreed that a Normalisation Committee comprising of Board and Management representatives will be set up to oversee and monitor USA Cricket's compliance roadmap and the ICC Board will reserve its right to suspend or expel the Member for continued non-compliance," ICC said in a statement.

New chapter under Gambhir begins

GOMESH S @Chennai

FOR about 25 minutes, the questions kept coming. It was always expected to be the case. After all, India's new head coach, Gautam Gambhir, was addressing the media for the first time. And sitting by his side was the selection committee chairman Ajit Agarkar.

There was a lot to unpack. From Suryakumar Yadav getting the T20I captaincy ahead of Hardik Pandya, Shubman Gill named as vice-captain across formats, to the future of Ravindra Jadeja and Suryakumar in ODIs and the support staff for the series... a lot of questions needed answers.

Gambhir and Agarkar clarified one thing after another without mincing words. There were no ambiguous answers starting from why Surya was named as T20 captain. Agarkar started with the Mumbai batter being one of the deserving candidates, but made clear of the factors that were involved. One, Pandya's fitness. Two, feedback from the dressing room. "The one (Surya) we know has been around the dressing room over the last year and we got feedback from the dressing room too. He has got a good cricketing brain and he is still one of the best T20 batters in the world," Agarkar said, before adding, "You want a captain that's going to be more likely to play all the games. We think he's a deserving candidate and hopefully we'll see over time how he develops into the role."

While mentioning that it would help the team manage Pandya's workload better, Agarkar also made it clear that they were in a fix when Pandya got injured and Rohit Sharma was not available for T20Is after the ODI World Cup last year. It eventually led them to name Gill as vice-captain so that should there be a case of injury or form, they don't have to go back to someone else. "Shubman is the guy we feel, he's a three format player. He seems to show a lot more qualities over the last year or so from the dressing room. That's why we want to have somebody who can learn from the senior guys," he said.

My experience or my learning has been very simple. In a sport, it's all about winning, so I don't deviate from something like that.. A happy dressing room is a winning dressing room. I think I don't like complicating things and that's the kind of profession I'm in - Gautam Gambhir, India head coach

If the chief selector cleared the air that Jadeja was only rested and Surya is not considered for ODIs at the moment, Gambhir gave the details of the support staff for the Sri Lanka tour, something the BCCI hadn't made public before. The former India captain confirmed that Abhishek Nayar and Ryan ten Doeschate would be his assistant coaches while Sairaj Bahutule and T Dilip serve as bowling and fielding coaches, respectively, for the tour. "Really happy with the BCCI. They've agreed with most things I've asked for. The crux of the support staff will remain as they are. The rest of the staff will be finalised after the Sri Lanka tour," Gambir said.

Meanwhile, both the chief selector and head coach were on the same page on players being available as much as possible. Whether it is Rohit and Virat Kohli for ODIs or the Test pros playing Duleep Trophy before the long international season, they ensured the message was clear. Gambhir said: "I've said it before, workload management for someone like (Jasprit) Bumrah is important. If you are a batter who is in good form, might as well play all the games. Now that Rohit Sharma and Virat Kohli will play only two formats, I expect them to be available for most games." Agarkar, meanwhile, said, "I haven't discussed with Gautam yet. It's not always easy. But there will certainly be enough players out of that squad that are likely to play the first (Duleep Trophy) game at least. That's the only game they can really play. We'll sit down and discuss which guys really need to play," Agarkar said.

As for his approach in this new role, Gambhir's answer largely revolved around three phrases — freedom, security and winning. "My experience or my learning have been very simple. In sport, it's all about winning, so I don't deviate from something like that," he said, before adding, "sometimes, international cricket can be tough and it can be insecure as well because only 15 can play. But it's the job of the support staff to try and keep them in a happy state and that is going to be one thing which we definitely will be working for."

It is still early days and one will have to wait and see how Gambhir's tenure goes, especially when they are challenged on the field. For now, however, one thing seems clear. It really is a new chapter in Indian cricket, something that could be very different from recent times.

SENSORINEURAL HEARING LOSS

PROLONGED EXPOSURE TO LOUD NOISE CAN TURN YOU DEAF

HEMANT KUMAR ROUT @Bhubaneswar

WHEN Alka Yagnik, the iconic voice behind numerous Bollywood hits, revealed on social media that she has been diagnosed with rare sudden sensorineural hearing loss (SSNHL), it sparked widespread concern and brought to fore the rising incidence of sensorineural hearing loss cases across India. Also known as sudden deafness, SSNHL is a rapid-onset form of sensorineural hearing loss. A noticeable reduction in hearing abilities over a period of 72 hours or less is a major alert. It can affect one or both ears and often occurs without any preceding symptoms, making it particularly alarming. There are mainly four types of sensorineural hearing loss - unilateral, bilateral, asymmetrical, and sudden sensorineural hearing loss. While unilateral sensorineural hearing loss (USNHL) has been found to affect 8-15% of the Indian population, 1-4% people are affected by bilateral hearing loss. SSNHL affects roughly five to 20 in one lakh people.

Although USNHL is more common in nonelderly men, SSNHL has emerged as a growing public health concern post Covid-19. According to health experts, since the novel coronavirus attacks the human organs, it first results in loss of sense of taste or hearing. Sensorineural hearing loss is generally caused by damage to the structures in the inner ear or auditory nerve. Some also suffer from chronic sensorineural hearing loss that develops gradually over time and typically progresses slowly. "Sensorineural hearing loss is mostly found among adults accounting for more than 90% of hearing loss in elderly people. Whereas, SSNHL can affect people of all age groups. Common causes of SSNHL include exposure to loud noises, genetic factors, or the natural aging process; while viral infection is believed to be the most common cause of sudden hearing loss," said Dr Radhamadhab Sahu, head of ENT and skull base surgery at SUM Ultimate Medicare, Bhubaneswar.

CAUSES AND SYMPTOMS

SSNHL can strike unexpectedly and occur at any age in a short time. It has left many individuals grappling with sudden and severe hearing impairment. Medical professionals have identified multiple triggers and a range of potential causes behind the medical condition. "Nowadays we are attending many patients, mostly children, who are suffering from sudden hearing loss after mumps infection. It can also affect adults by common viruses like herpes and varicella. Other causes are chemotherapy drugs, severe noise trauma, sudden bleeding in tumour, meningitis, stroke, painkiller overdose, and antitubercular drugs," Dr Sahu said.

While the exact cause remains unknown in many cases, there are several key factors that could be responsible. Apart from idiopathic origins, viral infections, autoimmune diseases, trauma, ototoxic medications, circulatory problems, tumours, neurological disorders and metabolic disorders are some of the causes. Senior otolaryngologist at Manipal Hospitals Dr Samarendra Behera says SSNHL occurs when the inner ear and hearing nerve (cochlear nerve) gets damaged. Among multiple causes behind SSNHL, old age is the primary cause. Other causes are head injury, viral infection of the inner ear, cochlear nerve, tumours, and exposure to loud noise, etc. In approximately half of SSNHL cases, no specific cause can be identified, he adds.

Common culprits of SSNHL include viruses that cause mumps, measles, or influenza, which may lead to inflammation or damage in the inner ear. Autoimmune conditions and diseases such as systemic lupus erythematosus and multiple sclerosis might trigger SSNHL by affecting the inner ear or auditory nerve.

"High doses of antibiotics and certain chemotherapy agents can have adverse effects on the auditory system, leading to SSNHL. Tumours affecting the auditory nerve and neurological conditions such as multiple sclerosis can also affect the auditory pathways in the brain, sometimes resulting in sudden hearing loss," said Dr Girish Anand, consultant (ENT surgery) at Aster CMI Hospital, Bengaluru.

The hallmark symptom of SSNHL is a sudden decrease in hearing ability. Many affected individuals report experiencing ringing, buzzing, or hissing sounds in the ear. This symptom often accompanies sudden hearing loss. Another common symptom is a spinning sensation or dizziness that can be severe and disorienting. "The condition is diagnosed through physical examination, hearing tests, such as audiometry, tympanometry, and auditory brainstem response," said Dr Anand.

TREATMENT

Sensorineural hearing loss isn't a life-threatening condition, but it limits a person's ability to communicate if not properly managed. Timely intervention is the key for the best outcomes. Corticosteroids are often the first line of treatment for SSNHL. Medications such as prednisone are prescribed to reduce inflammation and swelling in the inner ear, which may help restore hearing. Treatment typically starts with a high dose and tapers off over several weeks.

Advanced therapies like hyperbaric oxygen therapy, which involves breathing pure oxygen in a pressurised room or chamber, helps increase oxygen delivery to the inner ear and promote healing. If a viral infection is suspected as the cause of SSNHL, antiviral drugs are prescribed. Treating any underlying health issues, such as autoimmune diseases or metabolic disorders, is also crucial.

Dr Lakshmi Ranjit, associate consultant (ENT) at VPS Lakeshore, Kochi, said steroids have been found to be effective in treating SSNHL and they include oral prednisone or intratympanic steroid injection. Proper diagnosis and treatment are important in recovery. "Delay in treatment can lead to a reduction in the rate of recovery. In people who have experienced dizziness or other complications, the chances of recovery are less," Dr Ranjit added. Since there is no guaranteed cure for SSNHL, early intervention could be helpful. The first few hours during loss of hearing is called the golden hour. If recognised and treatment is initiated, the recovery chances are high. In cases where hearing loss persists despite treatment, hearing aids or cochlear implants are recommended. These devices can help manage long-term hearing loss, Dr Sahu said.

PREVENTIVE MEASURES

Amid growing concerns about SSNHL, health experts have emphasised on taking preventive measures. Exposure to high noise levels is a known risk factor for hearing loss. To prevent SSNHL, it's crucial to protect your ears in noisy environments. As certain medications can have harmful effects on the inner ear, people should always follow medical advice and consult doctors about the potential side effects of any prescribed or over-the-counter medications.

Dr Behera says managing chronic health conditions like diabetes and hypertension through regular check-ups, a balanced diet, and a healthy lifestyle can help maintain good hearing health. "Vaccination against viral infections, such as mumps and measles can be an added protection. Besides, routine hearing tests to detect early signs of ear infection and hearing loss and regular check-ups with an audiologist can help identify potential issues before they develop into more serious conditions," he added.

AVOID NOISY ENVIRONMENTS

There are three types of hearing loss

1. Conductive (involves the outer or middle ear)
2. Sensorineural (inner ear)
3. Mixed (a mix of the two)

PRIMARY SYMPTOMS

- Sudden deafness: Significant loss of hearing over a short period
- Tinnitus: Ringing or buzzing sound in the ears
- Vertigo: Sensation of dizziness or spinning
- Fullness in the ear: Feeling of pressure or congestion in the ear

SOME TREATMENT OPTIONS

- Corticosteroids: These medications can help reduce inflammation in the inner ear
- Antiviral medication: If a viral infection is suspected, antiviral medication may be prescribed
- Hearing aids/ cochlear implants: These devices can amplify sounds and improve hearing ability

HEARING LOSS LEVELS

Mild (loss between 26 to 40 decibels)

Moderate (loss between 41 to 55 decibels)

Severe (loss over 71 decibels)

Viral infections like herpes, measles, and mumps are common causes of hearing loss

PREVENTION

- Keeping away from loud noise is the best protection. In the workplace, plastic earplugs or glycerin-filled earmuffs can help protect hearing
- If you work around a lot of noise, think about regular hearing tests
- Avoid risks from hobbies and play, like using power tools, or attending music concerts. Wearing hearing protectors or taking breaks from the noise can protect your ears

MYTH BUSTING

Dr Ashok BC on Liposuction

HOD, department of plastic reconstructive and aesthetic surgery and chief of medical services, Aster Whitefield Hospital

Myth: Liposuction is a weight loss solution

Fact: Liposuction does not work as a weight loss method but rather modifies the shape of the body. It removes subcutaneous fat deposits which are difficult to eliminate through diet or exercise. Such individuals should be typically near their ideal weight. However, if they have got trouble areas where fat accumulates, it will hardly disappear regardless of how hard they try.

Myth: The results are permanent

Fact: The extracted fat cells do not grow back after liposuction but keeping them that way demands healthy living habits. Weight gain on the other hand causes growth in the remaining adipose cells thereby affecting the treated areas. Nevertheless, results can be permanent provided one maintains stable weight.

Myth: Liposuction can remove cellulite

Fact: Liposuction alone cannot remove cellulite which occurs due to bands of fibrous tissue pulling down on the skin surface creating depressions, hence other methods such as specialised massages or laser therapy may be included in cellulite treatment.

Myth: It can improve skin laxity

Fact: Liposuction primarily addresses subcutaneous fat. Deep dermal layers are not its domain though. In order to achieve better results patients with poor skin elasticity may need other procedures such as tightening or lift for their skin. However, in young patients after liposuction skin shrinks to certain extent.

Myth: Liposuction methods are the same

Fact: 3D liposuction, liposculpture or 360 liposuctions are some of the newer techniques in liposuctions developed to highlight the natural body contours and give a different look to the part being addressed.

Children have hyperactive immune system, more vulnerable to allergies

Children are more vulnerable to allergies due to their hyperactive immune system and immature capability to quickly neutralise external agents as compared to adults, says Dr Neeraj Gupta, senior consultant (paediatrics), Sir Ganga Ram Hospital, Delhi, in an interview with Ashish Srivastava. Edited excerpts:

● How do you define paediatric allergies?

Allergy in general is considered as an exaggerated response by an individual's immune system to an external agent. Whenever our body or our immune system is exposed to external agents or environmental factors of different types, our body recognises them as either harmless or harmful. If the immune system recognises them as harmless, then the body doesn't react against them. But for some reason, if the body considers them harmful, as self-defence, the body's immune response works against it. And that is the main cause of allergies. Children are more vulnerable to allergies due to their hyperactive immune system and immature capability to quickly neutralise external agents as compared to adults. The symptoms can be coughing, breathing difficulties, runny or itchy or blocked nose and rashes on the body. Some other symptoms like vomiting and severe abdominal pain can also occur.

● What are the root causes behind their occurrence among children?

Allergies need two factors which work together in a given patient. The first is genetic. Whenever an allergic child comes to us, we usually ask about family history. There may be somebody in the family with some sort of allergy, respiratory allergy, skin allergy, nose allergy, or some gastrointestinal allergy. This actually tells us about the genetic predisposition, which we usually call as atopy. It means if a child's father or mother or some other person who is blood relative has a history of allergy, then this increases the chances of developing allergy in this particular child. This is called the genetic predisposition, also called atopy. In a predisposed high risk child, under certain environmental factors, they will start producing certain symptoms. The common environmental factors could be respiratory allergens, allergens which are usually contacted by inhalation. These could be some animal danders like cats or dogs or certain pollens because of grasses, trees, weeds. Allergenic materials released or secreted by cockroaches, dust mites or fungal molds and spores can also be airborne and thus responsible for symptoms. Inhalation of any of these in a high risk child will be responsible for nose or chest symptoms like sneezing, running nose, blocked nose, itching in the nose or throat. It may also cause chest pain, chest tightness, coughing or breathing difficulty. There are also other routes, like for example a person may have ingested allergenic food items. Sometimes allergens come in contact with the skin and produce eczema or dry itchy skin. So in nutshell allergies are the result of a complex interaction between genetic and environmental factors.

● What are the common food items having allergens?

The common food items which are responsible for developing allergic manifestations include milk, egg, peanuts, tree nuts like almond and cashew, fish, shell-fish, prawn, shrimp, wheat and soya. Allergens like eggplant or brinjal and other fruits and vegetables can also produce symptoms.

● How can parents identify the symptoms?

The common symptoms are recurrent cough, cold, breathing difficulty, chest pain, chest tightness, running or blocked or itchy nose, breathing through the mouth, snoring, throat irritation. Abdominal pain, severe vomiting after ingesting certain food, or some itchy skin rashes can also occur. Sometimes allergies can be life threatening with low blood pressure or oxygen saturation. Allergic symptoms are usually round the year with seasonal variation. There can be multiple triggers in a given patient. Positive family history increases the predisposition to abnormally react to environmental triggers. Fever does not usually accompany allergic reactions.

● How can this be managed?

The management can be classified in two main categories - symptomatic treatment and root cause management. In symptomatic management, nasal sprays, nebulisers or inhalers may be advised to clear chest congestion, and for other allergic symptoms, tablets or syrups may be prescribed. Ointments, creams or moisturisers are usually required for skin problems. There are also certain allergy tests available like skin or blood tests. You need to contact your physician to know about which particular test is relevant for yourself or your child. Tests will help you to identify the possible causes which are responsible for symptoms in yourself or your child. Once you know that, you can try to implement either the specific avoidance measures, or even give them specific therapies like immunotherapy to resolve the root cause. These are also called allergy vaccines. They are especially useful if started timely in a particular patient.

'Cholera is an indicator of poor hygiene in an area'

UNNIKRISHNAN S @T'Puram

CHOLERA is a bacterial infection caused by vibrio cholerae, primarily affecting the small intestine. It spreads through contaminated food or water that carries the bacterium, releasing a toxin and causing severe symptoms like watery diarrhoea, vomiting, and dehydration.

Symptoms can quickly escalate, leading to electrolyte imbalances, weakness, and in severe cases, shock or death if untreated. Treatment focuses on rehydration through oral or intravenous fluids, antibiotics to reduce the duration of diarrhoea, and zinc supplements, particularly beneficial for children. Prevention strategies include ensuring access to safe drinking water, improving sanitation practices, promoting hygiene such as washing hands, and administering oral cholera vaccines in high-risk areas.

XPLAINER

Cholera remains a pressing public health concern, especially in regions lacking adequate sanitation infrastructure where overcrowded living conditions and poor hygiene exacerbate transmission. Sporadic outbreaks occur in different parts of the country, highlighting ongoing challenges in disease control. The most recent was an outbreak at a care home in Kerala that left one dead and 21 hospitalised. Dr Purushothaman Kuzhikkathukandiyil, a professor of paediatrics at MES Medical College, Malappuram, said, "Cholera serves as an indicator of poor hygiene conditions in an area. Infections like cholera, typhoid, and hepatitis A and B often stem from contaminated water sources."

According to the US Centre for Disease Control and Prevention, cholera affects 1.3 to 4 million people annually worldwide, with 21,000 to 143,000 deaths attributed to it. Confirmation of cholera is crucial for appropriate management, involving specific antibiotics, rehydration therapy, and public health measures to prevent further spread. Diagnostic methods typically include stool routine and culture testing.

As the Kizomba community grows rapidly in the city, dance enthusiasts tell us what makes this form the new thing on the block

KNOW MORE

Kizomba is one of the most popular genres of dance originating from Angola. It is known for having a slow, insistent, somewhat harsh yet sensuous rhythm as a result of electronic percussion. Its music has the influences of traditional Semba music from Brazil and Zouk music from the French Caribbean Island.

LET'S dance!

MONIKA MONALISA

APOORVA R loves to dance and discovered Kizomba during a social event. And that was enough for her to fall in love with the dance form. So much so, to learn more about it, she enrolled herself into a workshop. "I came across this form at a dance night hosted by one of the clubs. It looked like a Latin dance but was even more beautiful," says Apoorva, a 26-year-old freelance artiste in the city.

Kizomba's refreshing moves are one of the reasons for its growing popularity. "I love Latin dance and have been part of so many workshops on Salsa and Bachata. I wanted to learn something new. That's when I came across Kizomba. We usually associate sensual couple dances with Latin dance forms but Kizomba is an African form which is new on the block," says Siddhi Mehta, a brand head at a startup and a dance enthusiast.

Kalpana Balakrishnan, who runs a dance studio, points out that one of the reasons for the popularity of the dance form is social media. "The internet has made the world a small place. There were so many videos and reels about it. Another reason is that it has catchy beats and many popular pop artistes like Rihanna and Drake have also used these beats in songs. Of course, the original beats are very different, but songs by these popular artistes make it more familiar," says Balakrishnan.

City-based dance instructor Vineeth Naidu, who has been a professional dancer for the past 20 years, agrees that music is a primary factor for its popularity. "Partners make deeper connections than any other couple dance form. As a dancer myself, I feel the technicalities in Kizomba are much deeper," says Naidu. He discovered Kizomba in 2015 when he was at an international destination and saw many artistes practising it. "I found the dance form to be challenging but beautiful," says Naidu, who is coming up with a dance festival called Tuk Tuk in October, which promotes Kizomba and will also see many international artistes performing.

JUMP START

POOJA DAS

IN an ever-evolving world of fitness, beauty and health, everyone is looking for that perfect balance between staying young and ageing gracefully. Because let's be honest, there is no shortcut here. But as a mythical elixir of life remains elusive, advancements in technology, innovative fitness regimes, and cutting-edge recovery therapies are continually transforming the fitness landscape, making it more exhilarating with each new discovery. And Bengaluru is the perfect microcosm of these emerging trends.

'Repetition is key'

Anuj Srivastava, founder of Troop, emphasises there is an increasing interest in exclusive handstand classes. "People often start training and realise there are movements they can't do, like a simple push-up. Learning handstands becomes appealing because it looks cool and it teaches you coordination, mindfulness, and awareness, as you need to be conscious of your body when you're upside down," says Srivastava. Troop's 60-minute handstand classes, limited to six people at a time, ensure personalised attention, including wrist and shoulder mobility drills, core exercises, and wall-supported handstand work. "We've just started these classes three months ago, inspired by gyms in Indonesia, Thailand, and Europe that focus on mastering one skill through consistent practice. Repetition is key; we have to do the same drills repeatedly to get better," Srivastava explains. For beginners, he advises not to push too hard and to have a spotter when practising upside down. Kamakshi Ganesh, an architect and a student in one of these classes, shares, "It's exciting because it's different from any regular workout. The progression from thinking it's an impossible task to doing it for even a microsecond before you fall is a little addictive, and you want to feel it more, so you keep practising."

Focus on recovery

Along with strength training, like the one Srivastava teaches his students, there is also an increasing emphasis on recovery with alternative therapies like cryotherapy, ice baths, and red light therapy (RLT). Dr Garima Gaur, a wellness and bio-hacking consultant at Wellness Co, an integrative wellness clinic, explains, "RLT involves exposing the skin to low levels of red or near-infrared light, promoting muscle recovery, reducing inflammation, and increasing circulation," Compared to traditional fitness routines, she says that the therapy accelerates muscle repair and reduces soreness. "RLT is versatile and can be integrated into various workouts like strength training, body callisthenics, Pilates, and yoga," she adds. "There has been a notable rise in the popularity of alternative recovery therapies, like RLT and whole body cryotherapy, driven by growing awareness of their benefits, increased research backing their efficacy, and the pursuit of holistic and non-invasive treatment options by fitness enthusiasts."

Sheena Hinduja, founder of BlackBx, a fitness studio on Kasturba Road well known for its dark room fitness sessions, agrees on the rising awareness in the alternative recovery therapies. "Recovery is crucial, especially for those working out six to seven days a week. We are also planning to start red-light therapy sessions," shares Hinduja, adding that she personally experienced the benefits of an ice bath. "Ice baths give the body a shock, which is great for muscle recovery. We also collaborated with a company working in innovative technology in fitness space and got massage guns for clients to use post-session to release muscle tension," she adds.

Embracing technology

As is with any space in the current times, Hinduja feels that 'technology is the next big thing in the fitness space.' Pooja Sharma, a fitness influencer, points out that these emerging trends reflect how people are looking at fitness as not just working out but more holistically. "One of the interesting things is how we are using technology to improve overall fitness. It is not just limited to some set of workouts. It is holistic fitness that we are focusing on these days, like virtual reality is a cool technology to keep one engaged while doing workouts. Similarly, biohacking provides optimised solutions for individual performance. I saw a mattress recently where you can actually control the temperature. At night, it becomes cold, and while waking up, it becomes warmer," says Sharma.

Poet-writer Jayant Kaikini on the play Jategiruvanu Chandira, which explores the idea of citizenship and belonging against the backdrop of Partition; it is being staged in the city today

DESE GOWDA

THE 1971 American musical film Fiddler on the Roof, an adaptation of the 1964 Broadway musical, is retrospectively considered one of the greatest musicals in film history. Based on Tevye and His Daughters and other short stories by Ukrainian author-playwright Sholem Aleichem, the musical and film explore the lives of Jewish villagers in early 20th-century Tsarist Russia amidst changing social norms and external pressures. Today, an adaptation, penned by acclaimed poet, lyricist, and writer Jayant Kaikini, titled Jategiruvanu Chandira, is being staged at Ranga Shankara. The play is directed by Ninasam veteran Huligappa Kattimani, who also stars in the lead role, while N Mangala, the wife of renowned actor Rangayana Raghu, plays the female lead.

Originally written in the late '90s for Ninasam's travelling theatre Tirugata at the behest of musician-composer Bhaskar Chandavarkar, Jategiruvanu Chandira explores what it means to be a citizen. It examines how simple lives are disrupted by forces beyond their control and how people grapple with the pain of being uprooted from their homes. "Instead of pre-revolution Russia, it's set in India during the Partition. This made the pain more immediate and relatable; otherwise, the story might feel distant and harder to connect with emotionally," shares Kaikini. "While the Partition primarily affected people in the north directly, displacing families from their homelands, in South India, the impact was different. It created fissures among neighbours and friends along religious lines. People who had lived together peacefully suddenly turned against each other, saying, 'You have a country now, go there!' People were made to feel like strangers, forced to move to unfamiliar lands."

A still from the play

Kaikini believes that the play is even more relevant today than when it was first written. "At this moment, it is vital to humanise our fellow countrymen through art, rather than speeches. When we begin to see each other as individuals with the same problems, needs, and lives, many of our issues diminish. Perspectives change, and the division of our citizens based on caste, creed, or religion decreases. Some of our countrymen have become so divided that they hesitate to even speak their names in public," he explains. "Social media and digitalisation have created an illusion of connection, but it often lacks genuine interaction. Productions like this play help people untangle the complexities they've created in their lives. They come to understand that life is simple, impermanent and that we can find happiness with our fellow beings. Why should I view my neighbours, whom I've known for years, differently because of someone else's influence? These are the messages that viewers have shared with me after watching the play. If art can achieve this understanding, then its purpose is truly fulfilled."

(The play will be staged today at 7.30pm at Ranga Shankara, JP Nagar. Tickets are priced at ₹200 on bookmyshow.com)

Craving a relationship, I hooked up with a guy on a dating app, knowing he wanted something casual. I really like him and want more, but he does not. I'm heartbroken and unable to move on. Please help.

Experiencing a one-sided relationship, however briefly, can be extremely painful. Your feelings are valid, as you have emotionally invested in someone with whom you felt a real connection. Moving on is hard because there never was a 'real relationship' in the first place. He had made his intentions clear, and yet you hoped it would be different. To begin healing, it is crucial to completely distance yourself from him. Do not ever contact him. Delete his details from your phone. Treat this like an actual breakup. Allow yourself to mourn this loss. Create a disciplined routine for yourself where you prioritise your mental well-being. Exercise can help release feel-good endorphins, and journaling can help you unentangle your mixed-up emotions. In the future, do not get into a 'casual relationship' as you are looking for something serious. Be strong and never compromise on what you need from a relationship, no matter how tempting it is.

PARVATASANA IN SWASTIKASANA VARIATION

(SEATED MOUNTAIN POSE IN AUSPICIOUS ASANA VARIATION)

This practice makes the body feel stable and steady, like a mountain where the lower body has the legs crossed in Swastikasana (Auspicious Pose). Here, the sit bones are grounded, rooting the sacrum downwards, while the upper body is stretched upwards. It helps release stress and tension in the shoulders and lower back, with the trunk and chest being lifted and expanded along with the engaging of the abdominal muscles. This is a hip-opening pose. With the chest and arms active, this pose can also be included in heart opening sequences. This pose can be practiced to relieve back pain, strengthen your arms, cure digestive ailments, or correct breathing patterns.

STEPS

- Start in Swastikasana and stretch your hands vertically up over your head. Don't keep your palms pressed against each other. Exhale. If it is difficult, you can sit in Ardha Padmasana, Vajrasana, Sukhasana, or on a chair.
- Once comfortable, keep your eyes closed while bringing awareness to your breath.
- Feel the sense of grounding as you remain in the pose for about 4-6 breaths, or more, like 24 breaths if done as part of pranayama.
- To release, slowly bring your hands down and place your palms on the crown of your head. Stay here for a while.
- Take a deep breath in, and as you exhale, gently bring your hands down. Take a few breaths, and then do a second round of practice. You can hold the posture longer.
- Release, and gently open your eyes. Release your legs and hands.
- Relax in Dandasana (Staff Pose).

BENEFITS

- Stretches and strengthens the arms, shoulders, and back muscles.
- Helps cure stiffness in the back, arms, shoulders, knees, and ankles.
- Increases the capacity of the lungs.
- Helps develop the strength of the diaphragm muscle.
- Helps strengthen the elbow joints, palms, knees, hips, and legs.
- Helps restore the natural curve of the spine.
- Helps realign the shoulders and upper spine and relieves the pain from the lower back.
- Increases the blood circulation in the lumbar, sacral, and abdomen areas.
- Helps to stimulate the digestive process.
- The pose is known to be therapeutic for students with asthma, sinusitis, and other nasal disorders.
- Has a relaxing effect on the nervous system.
- Tones the abdominal organs, pelvis, and side muscles.
- Helps reduce excess fat in the arms.
- A preparatory pose for other poses like the seated Mountain Pose or Elevated Lotus.

LIMITATIONS

- Students suffering from sciatica or have weak knees, back, shoulders, or any spinal injury, should take advice from a yoga expert before practising.
- Those suffering from a knee or ankle injury can use a chair for support.
- Not advisable during pregnancy. But you can practise while sitting on a chair or couch, or in Vaijrasana or Sukhasana.

EXPRESS: ILLUSTRATION

I did not begin as an editor. I was a business reporter once. It was over 15 years ago when I set out on my professional voyage. A symposium in my undergrad, helmed by the doyens of print media, cannon-balled me into journalism. I still remember my interview at a leading daily in Bengaluru. A few customary questions, which I answered with aplomb, catapulted me into the fascinating realm of business journalism. It was, however, bewildering. I had scant exposure to business, markets, economics, and the corporate world, but I still ventured into the unknown, since the call to pen was too loud.

Day 2 on the job, and I was already assigned to cover a nascent e-commerce platform showcasing its capabilities to the media. After the press conference, my erudite colleagues helped me chisel out a readable story, and my business editor gave my efforts and language a nod of appreciation. Two months later, however, I was able to muster only two bylines, and the helplessness of flying blind over uncharted terrain hit like a truck. For once I wondered, "What am I doing here?" I wanted to be a journalist indeed, but business journalism felt alien. My then business editor, who was instrumental in guiding me on the path that led me to where I am today, gave me just four simple words as advice: "Learn on the job!"

Learning on the job seems a bit clichéd. But I realised that when you work, your role and everything it entails are your greatest workplace peers. They challenge you, teach you, and give you purpose. Six months later, I had picked up some nitty-gritties of my trainee role, when I was left to fight a lonely battle, after my experienced co-workers moved. I was thrown into the deep end of the pool, only to realise there was no deep end. The entire pool was deep. Strangely, it gave me confidence and I became my own lifeguard, diving into the depths of responsibility, while creating my niche. I improved my writing, practised crunching financial numbers, built up a directory of sources, penned a plethora of articles, and when not doing any of these, I voraciously read. I became punctual and disciplined, displayed work ethic, and always owned up to my shortcomings with humility. While navigating this deep pool, my business editors and colleagues became my coaches. And each year soon turned into a decade of tests and triumphs.

Your first job is like your first love. You are on your own, with a lot on your shoulders. It's hard to say whether you should make the first move, or allow the job to have its way. You always want to impress, but your more experienced co-workers know better. There might be hostility and indifference, which can be won over by affability and efficiency. On your first outing as a fresher, you get first-hand experience of 'standing on your own feet'. Far away from the comforts of home, you enter the real world where competition meets career. Hence, it is imperative to understand that there will be defeats and questions, but accepting them with grace, embraced by your conviction and optimism, is key. We seldom realise that half of our younger life is spent on our job, a tryst most of us cannot avoid. It pays us, but the real excitement is in having it reward us, for which the effort is ours.

In one's career, there are those who come and go, while one would change jobs for better prospects. Change is a constant, but the values, traditions and professional precepts that have been imbibed, must be carried, improved, and celebrated. That's growth. When I close my eyes at my desk and travel back, I see my evolution as a journalist, and how my first and longest job spurred my passion for print. In our world, each day counts, just as its French etymology ('Jour' means Day). Every day is one of learning and storytelling, a timeless cycle that began for me over 15 years ago.

A WINNING SHORT STORY

Standing tall at 5' 2", Dr Shruti Hegde recently became India's first Miss Universal Petite, breaking notions of height in beauty pageants

MONIKA MONALISA

IT was a childhood dream to become a beauty queen which recently came true for Dr Shruti Hegde who became the first Indian to win the title of Miss Universal Petite. Standing tall at 5' 2", Hegde has surpassed the height challenge and criteria imposed by most beauty pageants. Studying to be a doctor by profession, Hegde has juggled her 36-hour shift and the dream of being a part of a pageant. "The dream of becoming a beauty queen was in my mind when I was very young, but eventually it disappeared. But I guess somewhere deep down, it was on my wishlist. However, when I started studying MBBS, this dream surfaced again," says the 29-year-old, who started her pageantry journey in 2018 with a Miss Dharwad contest. Following that, it was Miss Karnataka, Miss South India, and Miss Asia International. And then finally, it was Miss Universal Petite, which was held in Tampa, Florida in the United States of America.

Hegde agrees that at times it was difficult for her to manage both since medicine is not an easy course to follow but she didn't want to give up on either. "I have always managed both my studies and extracurricular activities. So eventually it was not difficult for me, because that's what I've been doing my whole life," says Hegde, who originally hails from Hubballi but is a regular to the city.

It was when she began studying MBBS that people suggested she concentrate entirely on her studies. "But for me, I wanted to do both. I would do whatever it takes to balance both. That's how the pageantry preparation also started. At times, it was difficult to manage both of them but I went for it," says Hegde, who is currently pursuing an MD in dermatology and working as an intern at a hospital in Tumakuru.

This pageant started in the year 2009. "It was not a very popular one in India, because none of the Indian contestants has won so far," says Hegde. "In every other international pageant, there is a height criteria. This was the first one to break that barrier," says Hegde.

LOVEOLOGY
Mahesh Natarajan

(The author is a counsellor with InnerSight)

Standing together

IMAGINE this situation: you and your loved one are out together somewhere, and something happens that really upsets and angers your partner. They then proceed to totally lose it, getting all agitated, super pissed off, and ready to take on the world. You have been there all along, and you didn't really think anything happened that needed such an acute reaction from your partner, and frankly, you think your partner is in the wrong here.

What do you do under such circumstances? Do you try to calm your partner and pull them away from the situation before things get worse for everybody, especially you both? Do you try to calm the others down, pleading with them directly or indirectly to walk away because you know your partner is not going to back down? Or, do you quietly distance yourself from your partner, as if to indicate that you are not to be clubbed together and that you don't really agree with or align with what your partner is like at that time? Or, do you join in with your partner, despite not being in agreement, just to give them a sense of moral support, deciding that dissonance did not matter when you both are in danger in a public place? Even more, would you want to hold your partner accountable, and yet at the same time, somehow care for them?

If you had thought there weren't really many choices, and reading the above made you take a pause and connect to the idea that you are making a choice, well done! That's really what's all this about. We are constantly making choices about how we demonstrate our connection as a couple, what it means to us that we are a couple, and how this unit can be united in the face of trouble. Often, it isn't a conscious choice in the moment of facing the trouble, but the reality is that what we would do is a choice that we may be better off considering even before we ever have to be in such a situation.

The magic question to ask yourself, and if you both are upto it, ask each other, is some version of, "If I get into some massive trouble, where I'm fully culpable, what would you do?" You could get very specific and replace 'some massive trouble' with specific situations of different legal, ethical and moral challenges to understand each other's boundaries of support connection and more, but when you think of these situations when they are still hypothetical, it can help you be clearer what you would do if and when they cease to be hypothetical.

It isn't to say that there is one right answer to the question here. Each answer is right for the person giving the answer for those circumstances. No response here is more loving than the other ones, and maybe it will be different if the person in trouble is a child rather than a partner.

We just want to understand each other better, know what we can expect from each other and that itself can allow us to face adverse situations with some sense of love.

'I SEE POLITICS AS INHERENTLY SATIRICAL'

Director Sahadev Kelvadi and producer Roopa Rao discuss at length their upcoming film, Kenda, which is produced under the Ameyukti Studios banner, and is set for release this week

Kenda does not glorify violence, We wanted to show the reality of rowdyism with the film

SAHADEV KELVADI, previously the cinematographer and co-producer of Roopa Rao's Gantumoote, is stepping into the director's chair with his own film, Kenda, for which he also serves as writer and cinematographer. The project marks the second collaboration between Rao and Kelvadi, who are producing the film under the Ameyukti Studios banner. "I'm fortunate to have Roopa by my side handling production and day-to-day set operations. Her extensive experience as a producer and director is invaluable as I navigate my directorial debut," says Kelvadi ahead of the film's release on July 26. The film is hitting the big screens after going through the festival circuits.

Kelvadi elaborated on the differences between his cinematographer and director roles. "As a cinematographer, I could somewhat detach while still planning ahead. But directing demands constant engagement. You're juggling multiple responsibilities, from script development to actor direction. There's a heightened sense of responsibility as a writer-director, especially with a debut film. Fortunately, our incredible cast made my job easier. While directing brought me immense joy, cinematography remains a deep passion. I'm grateful for the opportunity to explore both in Kenda," he explains.

According to Rao, it is taxing for a director to take multiple roles. She explains what drew her to Kelvadi's vision and got her involved in producing Kenda with him: "It's a constant battle, and I understand his situation having been a writer, director, and producer myself. Witnessing Sahadev sketch frames and think like a cinematographer firsthand, I realised the immense pressure. Balancing both roles is demanding. I think he lost about 7 kg during the shoot."

Rao goes back in time to where it all started with Kelvadi. "Our 13-year friendship and shared journey in filmmaking led to this collaboration. I had a film vision but lacked the resources. A mutual friend introduced me to Sahadev, and we discovered a shared passion for cinema. After his return from film studies in New York, we started working on Gantumoote while he developed Kenda. He shared the story with me, and knowing him personally, I was confident in his vision," she narrates. She further expresses her happiness to see the film hitting theatres this week. "It's been a two-year labour of love with shooting and post-production work. It was a joy to see the film come to life."

Roopa Rao's journey from IT to producing acclaimed films has been transformative. Reflecting on the challenges of operating outside the traditional film hub of Gandhinagar, she shares, "I'm still figuring it out. The industry is decentralising and Gandhinagar is no longer the film hub. Historically, Gandhinagar was the epicenter due to its proximity to finance, traders, and business. Unfortunately, it hasn't been welcoming, but it's also a hotbed of fascinating stories. Lessons from Gantumoote streamlined our approach for Kenda, including distribution. You can't predict what six crore Kannadigas will watch from a Gandhinagar office.

Kenda is billed to be a socio-political satire on disorganised crime. Kelvadi elaborates on how the film delves into this theme and the relevance it holds in today's societal context. "The film follows Keshava, a factory worker whose life is upended by a reunion. I see politics as inherently satirical, and the film offers a satirical lens on this. Through Keshava's journey amidst social and political turbulence, we explore themes of friendship and the working class, the unsung heroes of society. Set in an era before ubiquitous cell phones and the IT boom, Kenda offers a timeless narrative that resonates with contemporary audiences. I believe it will compel audiences to experience the film in theatres," he explains. Rao adds, "The film is set in the world of rowdyism, but it's a departure from the typical macho portrayals in Kannada cinema. We've avoided glorifying violence. Our characters are foot soldiers, not larger-than-life figures. We wanted to show the reality of their lives and the reasons behind their actions." Kelvadi further explains, "Violence isn't portrayed lightly, and when depicted, it raises certain questions both for the filmmaker and the audience. We've addressed these nuances carefully. The story was conceived from my experiences living in the city during the political turmoil of the '90s. As I grew older, I understood the reasons behind it, motivating me to explore this subject."

Rao explains their casting choices, saying, "Unlike the rest of the world, India has a unique concept of stars as demigods. For a story like Kenda, we needed actors who could seamlessly blend into their roles without overshadowing the narrative. Bharath, a versatile artist we've known for years, was a perfect fit, as were the rest of the cast." Along with Bharat, the film also features Pranav, Sridhar, Vinod Susheela, and Gopal Krishna Deshpande, among others. The music is by Ritwik Kaikini and lyrics written by Jayant Kaikini.
